ELANDER HALL, who admits he is "a scientific astrologer," casting horoscopes for Herbert Hoover and Gov. Smith, finds that Hoover will be the next President.

The stars, it seems, give Hoover "psychic and occult forces" and "dynamic action" that they don't give to Gov. Smith. The latter seems to do well without.

In Gov. Smith's case "the sun has progressed from the first house to the tenth house square with the planet Saturn," etc., and that is bad.

HOOVER will laugh at that and so will Smith, but once neither would have laughed.

Kepler, one of the six greatest astronomers, was obliged to practice astrology for the emperor to get help in his serious astronomical work.

MAMMOTHS, extinct thousands of years, have been found preserved, skin, hair, flesh, in northern ice. Hoping that men of the stone age might be similarly preserved, an expedition was sent to look.

ON an island, far north in cold Alaska, scientists discovered at the top of an almost inaccessible cliff the grave of an ancient stone age chief.

His coffin was lined with well-cured skins of the sea otter. His shirt was of bird skins, his clothing made of the finest furs. A favorite child, a seamstress to sew for him, a servant and hunter to get game for him, had been killed and buried with him to accompany him on his death journey.

THIS mummified family from the stone age will enlighten scientists. It interests us all, illustrating the unconquerable belief in a future life, [illegible] deeply planted in the human brain.

Why was the belief put there if only to be disappointed?

THE death of Loewenstein, Belgian millionaire, supposed to have jumped from his airplane 4,000 feet above the North Sea, is a warning against "one-man concerns."

One company which he dominated dropped tens of millions in value at his death.

IN this country one man is often the brains of a concern, but in no great publicly-owned enterprise is there any one man OWNERSHIP sufficient to cause trouble if that one man dies.

In General Motors, United States Steel or any of the great railroads or other organizations no man's death today could have a dangerous effect.

Financiers show their wisdom spreading stock ownership as widely as possible, constantly increasing the number of stockholders and creating advocates of corporation prosperity.

IN 1921, only seven years ago, the Westinghouse Company decided that the time had come "to try entertainers over the radio." Now radio entertainment is the national entertainment. And within a short time millions, sitting at home, will hear Democratic and Republican candidates talking directly to them. Things move rapidly.

SOME intelligent person might become useful and prosperous by establishing a school for radio speakers. Talking over the radio is unlike other talking. Things you can say face to face effectively are not effective over the radio.

VITUPERATION, denunciation of the opponents that made up old-fashioned spellbinding are not only useless but harmful in radio talking.

THE Pennsylvania Railroad orders $15,000,000 of steel passenger cars. The wooden car is to disappear from the Pennsylvania system.

Gen. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania, is to be congratulated. The wooden car is dangerous. The people are willing to pay for safety and should have it.

THE British Imperial Conference will recommend a great merger of British cable and wireless companies. Wireless menaces the cable's prosperity and usefulness. The British have found it possible for their government to own and operate telegraphs and telephones.

We can't do that here. But news from England may stir up cable and wireless combinations in this country. When comes to mergers the United States can compete with anybody.

"Too Busy"

FANNY BRICE

Billy Rose, song writer, is not Fanny Brice's "man." So she says herself from film location, Santa Monica, Cal. "Ridiculous! I hardly know him. Too busy to marry," she tersely added. Well?

Woman Shot in Fight

County detectives today sought Nick Spanos, 25, of Imperial, who fled, they say, after shooting Mrs. Mary Catch, 41, in the head last night. She is in the Presbyterian Hospital in a serious condition.

Frank Catch, 51, the woman's husband, was jailed today, charged with shooting Frank Spanos, 32, brother of Nick, in retaliation. The wounded man is in Mercy Hospital. The Spanos brothers accused Mrs. Catch, their cousin, of telling stories against them, detectives say, and the shooting followed.

KILLS SELF AS BARBER SHAVES HIM

While a barber was shaving him in the county home at Woodville today, John J. Ulrich, 29, of Millvale, suddenly grabbed the razor and slashed his own throat. He died a few minutes later.

Ulrich was taken to the home last December after, according to the morgue report, he had tried suicide in his home in Siegel street.

Pickford's Heart Fails

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 7—(AP.)—Jack Pickford, film and stage actor who is ill in a hospital here, was resting easily today and was expected to be able to return to his home in a few days.

The brother of Mary Pickford suffered a heart attack late Thursday night, and for a time fears were expressed that he would not recover. Later, however, Pickford responded to medical treatment and gradually rallied. Physicians declined to reveal the exact nature of his illness.

Pickford, who formerly was the husband of Marylin Miller, of footlight fame, had not been in the best of health of late, film friends said. He returned here recently, after resting up out of town in an effort to build himself up.

Band Concerts In Parks Begun

Beginning tomorrow and continuing every Sunday through the summer months, band concerts will be given in the county's North and South parks. Director of Parks Paul B. Riis made this announcement today.

Band pavilions have been erected near the flagstaffs in each park and seating accommodations to care for 5,000 persons have been constructed. The Amerita band will open the concert season Sunday.

Confesses He's Clubber

International News Service.

TOLEDO, O., July 7.—The mystery of Toledo's clubber, terror of women during the past five years, today was declared practically solved.

In the trial of Charles J. Hoppe, 26, for the murder of Dorothy Sielagowski, 7, Dr. L. A. Querner, expert alienist, for defense, testified that Hoppe had confessed to him that he had not only clubbed to death Lily Dale Croy, pretty Toledo school teacher, but also had clubbed three other Toledo women at various times during the past four years.

Dr. Querner characterized Hoppe as a degenerate of the lowest type, claiming that he was lacking all emotions and did not care what happened to himself.

CALLS HOPPE INSANE

The alienist said there was no question in his mind that Hoppe was insane and should be placed in an asylum rather than be given a sentence to the electric chair.

According to Dr. Querner's testimony, Hoppe, on the night of October 25, 1926, was looking out of a saloon near the Toledo University and saw Miss Croy leave the university alone. He trailed her in his automobile, following her up Washington street and on to Palmwood avenue. He then drove ahead of her, alighted near the Washington School and hid behind a tree. As the pretty school teacher walked past, he struck her over the head with a club. He then picked up his unconscious victim and in the darkness carried her behind the steps of the Washington School building, where he left her, dead.

SECOND CONFESSION

This makes the second murder Hoppe has confessed. His confession of the kidnaping and slaying of Dorothy Sielagowski, 7, was made May 30, the day after he killed the little girl.

The Croy confession was read in

Quits Solo Dance of 36 Hrs.

There seems to be some foundation for the report that misery loves company, so far as marathon dancing is concerned.

In the shuffle at Olympia Park, McKeesport, Charles Robertson, 23, carried on, a la solo, when his girl friend left him flat on the floor. Charles danced and danced. But he had nobody to talk with, no pretty face to inspire him. So he quit, after 36 hours of that. Tonight, with 144 hours in back of them at midnight, the remaining nine couples were scheduled to board the Japanese Gardens boat and spend the Sabbath day in the Monongahela River.

"Putt" Wise and Adelaide Healey dropped out of the waltz at Stahl Gardens, Homestead, today, cutting the field to 11 couples, who had passed the 250-hour mark. They will probably spend Sunday in a private home, thus evading the blue laws.

Air Record Goes to Germans

DESSAU, Germany, July 7.—(INS.)—The German aviators Johann Risticz and Wilhelm Zimmerman broke the world's aviation endurance record today.

At 2:42 o'clock this afternoon they had been aloft 58 hours and 38 minutes, having hopped off on Thursday at 4:04 a. m.

At 2:10 o'clock it was estimated that the men had flown 7,150 kilometers. They used a Junker machine, similar to the Bremen.

Lake Rate Pact Is Reached

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—A compromise agreement has been reached by officials of Northern and Southern lake cargo carriers on a 35-cent differential as between freight rates on lake cargo coal from Northern and Southern bituminous fields, it became known today.

Northern roads had fought for 45 cents differential while Southern carriers had held out for 25 cents.

The recent rate cut by Northern carriers increased the differential from 25 cents to 45 cents after the rate war lasting several years, and will expire at the close of the year. At that time, or after the Supreme Court rules on the legality of the cut by Southern roads last spring in face of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission disallowing the reduction the 35-cent differential will become effective.

The popularity of Pirate baseball in Pittsburgh for 1928 hangs in the balance today.

Weighed and found sadly wanting in the scale of public appreciation of their futile efforts to keep within saluting distance of the National League flag, the Buccaneers management, for the first time in history, this afternoon offered fans two games on a Saturday with the Giants for one admission, and a festal celebration in honor of Pie Traynor, popular captain of the Buccos, thrown in as an appetizer.

In years agone, even with a tail-end outfit, such a bargain matinee would have filled Forbes Field and left half of Oakland bulging over with fans fussing over the futility of seeing such a delectable baseball spectacle.

ATTENDANCE WATCHED

If the 1928 Pirates are going anywhere, the attendance at today's game may be a record-breaker.

If customers fail to rise to the bait of aforesaid markdown sale of what ordinarily would be balldom's most attractive event in Pittsburgh, then the Buccos might as well close up shop for this season, so far as the welkin ringers are concerned.

Pittsburgh fans in the past have loyally supported a losing team when it was pretty definitely conceded that the outfit could not win a high place in the league ranks. The attendance at Forbes Field lately has shown that the same loyal fans will not support a star aggregation, picked to win the pennant, while it flounders miserably near the tail end of baseball's annual parade.

Today's attendance at the Pirate-Giant Saturday bargain bill will settle finally what chance the Dreyfuss hired hands have with the people who pay their salaries, at least for this season.

MACHINE STRAW VOTE STRONG FOR SMITH

The largest number of votes taken in one day on any of the seven machines used for the last two weeks by The Sun-Telegraph in its straw balloting on the presidential candidates was recorded at the Jenkins Arcade yesterday, where Smith polled 333 votes against 277 for Hoover.

The odds for the day were 11-to-7 in Smith's favor in the 1,754 votes cast, only two machines showing in favor of Hoover. The total machine vote to date, however, shows 9,809 for Smith against 6,510 for Hoover.

ABOUT REPEATERS

Criticisms have been heard that repeaters have been active in the straw vote, with some individuals voting several times on one machine. The answer to this is that repeaters are to be expected in a straw vote, but are absorbed to a large degree by the great number of honest people voting. Then, too, it is argued, there is a likelihood that there are as many repeaters for one candidate as there are for the other.

An enthusiastic voter on the machine in the City-County Building yesterday left to return in a few minutes with a man he con-

2 SHOT DEAD IN MOUNTAINS

HARLAN, Ky., July 7.—(AP.)—Rifles barked near here today and when the echo of the last shot had faded away in the heart of Kentucky's mountains, famous as the scene of countless feuds, two men lay dead and a third was missing and believed killed.

The dead:

FLOYD BALL, 32, sheriff of Harlan county and father of six children.

JOHN HENSLEY, 45, a deputy sheriff.

Missing:

TOM HOLES, 48, a deputy sheriff.

The sheriff received an anonymous telephone message late last night at his home here reporting that a man was terrorizing passersby on the Mayo trail, 12 miles west of Harlan. Sheriff Ball had Hensley and Holes join him and left to investigate. At 3 o'clock this morning, persons residing near the scene of the tragedy heard a fusillade of shots. Investigation revealed the bodies of Ball and Hensley. Each had been shot three times in the back.

A posse was organized here in the middle of the night.

Though the officers had been active against moonshiners, no motive for the killings was agreed upon by the first investigators.

ITALIAN FLIERS GOING ON TO RIO

International News Service.

RIO DE JANERIO, Brazil, July 7.—All Brazil was at a fever pitch today over the courageous nonstop flight from Rome to Brazil of the Italian fliers, Capt. Arturo Ferrarin and Maj. Carlo P. Del Prete.

Scenes rivalled only by the celebrations following the armistice were enacted everywhere. A stupendous welcome here is planned for the fliers when thy arrive from Natal.

As their own plane, a Savoia-64, was damaged when they made their second landing at Touros, about 50 miles north of Natal, the fliers announced they will continue their flight here in a Brazilian airmail plane.

After their forced landing, Ferrarin and Del Prete were taken from Touros to Natal in an airmail plane and rested at the latter city yesterday.

4,417-MILE FLIGHT

When they made their first landing at Point Genipabu, 10 miles north of Natal, the fliers had covered a distance generally estimated at 4,417 miles without stopping, thus establishing a new world's record for long distance flying.

They covered this distance in just one minute less than 52 hours. Their average speed, slightly under 109 miles an hour, was considered remarkable. Their flight was the first successful attempt to fly directly from Europe to the South American mainland.

Ferrarin and Del Prete also have

RESCUE FLIER TO GO FOR FIVE STILL ON ICE FLOE

ACE PLANS 2ND DASH TO AID

International News Service.

LONDON, July 7.—Despite heavy fogs, Lieut. Shyberg, the Swedish aviator, who rescued his fellow flier Lundborg from the ice floe upon which he was marooned with five survivors of the crew of the lost dirigible Italia, expected to make several attempts today to rescue the other isolated men, advices from Stockholm stated.

In a daring flight, similar to that Lundborg made in the Swedish plane Upland to rescue Gen. Nobile, Shyberg swooped down from the sky and made a spectacular landing upon the treacherous ice floe where the marooned men were encamped.

As his plane was a small one, he could take only one man aboard. However, food, medicines and other supplies were left for Lieut. Viglieri and his four companions.

Meanwhile a wide search still continues for Capt. Roald Amundsen and his five companions who disappeared while searching for Nobile.

EX-KAISER FETES 3 FLIERS

DOORN, Holland, July 7.—(AP.)—Three trans-Atlantic fliers, Capt. Herman Koehl, Baron von Huennefeld and Maj. James Fitzmaurice, today were the guests of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany in his Doorn castle.

It was the gayest day that the castle has seen since the present master took possession, after his flight from Germany. In their honor the former ruler gave a banquet last night to which 25 guests were invited to meet the airmen and their families. At this function the former kaiser said that during his reign he always took the greatest interest in the development of German technology and never missed an opportunity to further it.

The village of Doorn was decorated with German, Irish and Dutch flags in honor of the fliers, who drove from the Soesterberg airdrome near Utrecht in one of the imperial cars.

POLICE TO WATCH PLAY

Director of Public Safety James M. Clark said today he had read the script of "The Captive," the play booked for presentation at the Gayety Monday, and had found nothing objectionable in it. The police, therefore, will not interfere with the production of the piece, he announced. Observers will be on hand, however, and if anything offensive develops in the course of the performance, Clark added, they will take appropriate action.

"The Captive" has been barred from presentation in New York, Detroit and Los Angeles by the police of those cities.

Clark said whether "The Captive" was objectionable depended on the interpretation placed on it. To some, the inferences might be vile, he said, while others would find nothing offensive in them. The courts, he added, would not consider inferences.

AVIATRIX AND AIDES ARRANGE TOUR

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Miss Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, who flew from Newfoundland to Wales in the plane Friendship, were bombarded today with scores of invitations to luncheons, theater parties and social affairs at exclusive clubs.

The fliers were rather tired today, for their tempestuous welcome by the city yesterday extended into the wee sma' hours this morning. They were quickly recognized at a theater last evening and received more applause than the performers.

Today "Lady Linda" will be the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Women's City Club. They will see a musical comedy this evening, and tomorrow will attend a luncheon at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club, where they will meet Miss Thea Rasche, the German aviatrix.

Tomorrow night Miss Earhart will attend a reception given by the United Neighborhood Houses, representing New York's social settlement work. The Boston settlement worker is worried over her long absence from home. She says she has "overstayed her leave" from the settlement house in the Hub where she worked before she made her trans-Atlantic flight.

The three fliers will go to Boston on Monday for a brief celebration there. On July 18 they will be feted at Williamsburg, Pa., Stultz's home town, and Altoona, Pa.

The reception in Chicago, from July 19 to 22, inclusive, promises to be the most elaborate welcome the trio will receive. The aviatrix is a graduate of Hyde Park High School, Chicago.

another world's record to their credit. Recently they stayed aloft in the same plane used in their Rome-Brazil flight, for 58 hours and 36 minutes.

The Italians had fair weather in crossing the Mediterranean, flying down the coast of Africa and across the South Atlantic as far west as the Cape Verde Islands. After that, however, they ran into heavy fogs which increased as they neared the mainland.

DEFEATED BY FOG

But they encountered their worst difficulties over Brazil. There was plenty of fuel still in the plane's tanks, so they decided to fly directly to this city. But the fog was so impenetrable that they lost their bearings and finally were forced to land at Point Genipabu.

From the ground, the weather appeared to be clearing and an hour and 20 minutes after landing they again took off for Rio. But after a few minutes of flying they realized that conditions were too bad for them to venture the 1,500-mile hop over a strange country.

They sought the airport at Natal, but could not locate it. Meanwhile apprehension for their safety was felt below by watchers. Finally they landed at Touros, but in doing so damaged the landing gear of their plane.

The fliers will probably arrive here tomorrow. The plane which will carry them will probably make stops en route at Pernambuco, Marcelo, Bahia and Caravellas.

FAIL TO NAME FAMILY KILLER

OSBORNE, Kan., July 7.—(AP.)—A coroner's jury late yesterday returned a verdict that Albert Kaser, his wife and six children, whose bodies were found May 31 in the ruins of their burned home, came to their deaths "by gunshot wounds from a .32-caliber revolver at the hands of parties unknown."

Buried without an inquest, the charred bodies were exhumed and found to bear bullet wounds.

Albert's younger brother, Fred, is accused of the crime. Witnesses testified that Fred owned a .32-caliber revolver and that he and his brother had quarreled.

court late yesterday over strenuous objections by Prosecutor Leroy Hunt, which were overruled by the court of four judges now sitting in the case in an effort to ascertain if Hoppe is really insane or should be sent to the electric chair for the killing of Dorothy Sielagowski.

Hoppe's confession follows:

"I, Charles Stanley Hoppe, confess voluntarily and without compulsion that I am the individual who killed Lillie Croy. I also struck a woman about four years ago at Jefferson and Twenty-first street, another on Austin street, another on Detroit avenue, another at a beer camp on the Dixie drive.

"The one on Austin occurred about two or three months ago. I hit her with an auto crank. The one on Detroit avenue occurred six or seven months ago. I hit her with a piece of two by four. She screamed, and I ran away. They took her to a hospital. The one at the beer camp I knocked unconscious.

"After each one of the attacks except the last one I ran to where I was living."

(Signed)

"CHARLES STANLEY HOPPE."

Hoppe's second confession clears up a murder which has baffled Toledo police and noted detectives from other cities for nearly two years and for which rewards totaling $12,000 were posted.

The body of Miss Croy was found under a fire escape at Washington school the morning of October 26, 1926, by her half-brother, Julius Weist.

ARMY BALLOON WINS

AIR MYSTERY DEEPENS

International News Service.

LONDON, July 7.—Theories as to the fate of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein, the Belgian "croesus" of the financial world, still abounded today, but his mysterious disappearance remained unexplained.

The original theory that the financial wizard accidentally pushed open an outer door of his plane and fell from the plane to his death received a severe setback yesterday. Tests were made in a similar Fokker plane which showed that the air pressure would have made it almost impossible for one man, no matter how strong, to unwittingly open the door he is supposed to have fallen through.

RIDICULE SUICIDE

Suicide, the second hypothesis, was generally ridiculed by Loewenstein's friends. His financial affairs were in good order, there were no known personal troubles, and, it was pointed out, Loewenstein was not the type of man to run away from any kind of trouble.

The latest theory is that Loewenstein had planned the disappearance himself, either as a hoax or for other reasons known only to himself. This theory was generally discredited.

NO MOTIVE

No explanation could be given for any possible motive of the banker in wanting to disappear. Some few suggested that he might possibly have staged the disappearance to reap the benefits of its probable effects upon the market. However, in that case he would have made himself an outcast in the financial world, and none of his friends could see him doing that, as his whole life was bound up in finance.

Mystery story enthusiasts all let loose their pet theories. One suggested that the banker dropped from the plane in a parachute and was picked up by a waiting yacht.

TAKES RACE BY 1½ MILES

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—The margin of a mile and a half brought victory to Capt. W. E. Kepner and W. O. Eareckson, Army pilots in the recent international balloon race, and with it permanent possession for America of the second Gorden Bennett trophy.

Kepner's distance as officially scaled yesterday by the geological survey was 460.9 miles, compared with 459.4 miles for the German entry, Barmen, piloted by Hugo Kaulen, Sr., and Jr., and 447.8 miles for Charles Dollfus and George Cormier, of the French bag, Blanchard.

The Blanchard, which came down in the Dan River, near Walnut Cove, N. C., was thought at first to have been the winner over the 11 other balloons which started from Detroit June 30 in quest of the international prize. Kepner's bag landed three miles south of Kenbridge, Va., and Kaulen's three miles south of Chase City, Va.

The National Aeronautic Association announced following the tabulation that it would furnish another trophy to replace the one retired by the Army's victory.

Streets in every section of the city were torn up and residents suffered great property damage.

Pittsburgh As Others See Us

"The Pittsburgh of today is on a scale tremendously greater than the Pittsburgh of my earlier recollections. What must the Pittsburgh of tomorrow be?"

W. W. ATTERBURY.

W. W. ATTERBURY

WILLIAM W. ATTERBURY, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, born in New Albany, Ind., January 31, 1866; educated at Yale University. Learned the practical side of railroading as student apprentice in Altoona shops and was advanced rapidly through various executive positions in the operating department of the railroad and became president of the system in 1925. In charge of U. S. railway operations in France during World War. Lives in Philadelphia.

For more than three decades I have been rather intimately acquainted with Pittsburgh and its industrial and economic development. On a basis of geographical and geological considerations, coal was welded into iron. Then came steel, then glass, then aluminum and a host of other enterprises, all of them alertly attended by scientists and financiers. Industrial growth set a magnificent pace for transportation development.

. . . The Pittsburgh of today is on a scale tremendously greater than the Pittsburgh of my earlier recollections. What must the Pittsburgh of tomorrow be! I am sure the record will answer eloquently.

Those who have already made Pittsburgh famous have been succeeded by others no less alert, capable and forward looking—and under their leadership the genius of Pittsburgh's people will continue to manifest itself in cultural and spiritual things as well as in material progress.

CHAIN CHILDREN; LASHED BY MOB

BLACKROCK, Ark., July 7.—(AP.)—Men and women spectators in a small, crowded courtroom here yesterday flogged a man and his wife charged with extreme cruelty to two adopted children.

The lash victims, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rhodes, were in jail today after being sentenced to 10 days and fined $10 apiece on the cruelty charges by Justice H. F. Franks.

Complaints were lodged against the couple by neighbors who alleged the two children, Gene and Wendell, 5 and 7, respectively, had been chained to rafters in the Rhodes' barn with their feet barely touching the floor. The foster parents testified they punished the children for getting dirty.

Goaded by the sight of the children, who were brought to court with their feet swollen from the chain bands, the neighbors pushed by the guards, the men seizing Rhodes and the woman, his wife. The prisoners were recovered by officers only after severe whippings had been administered.

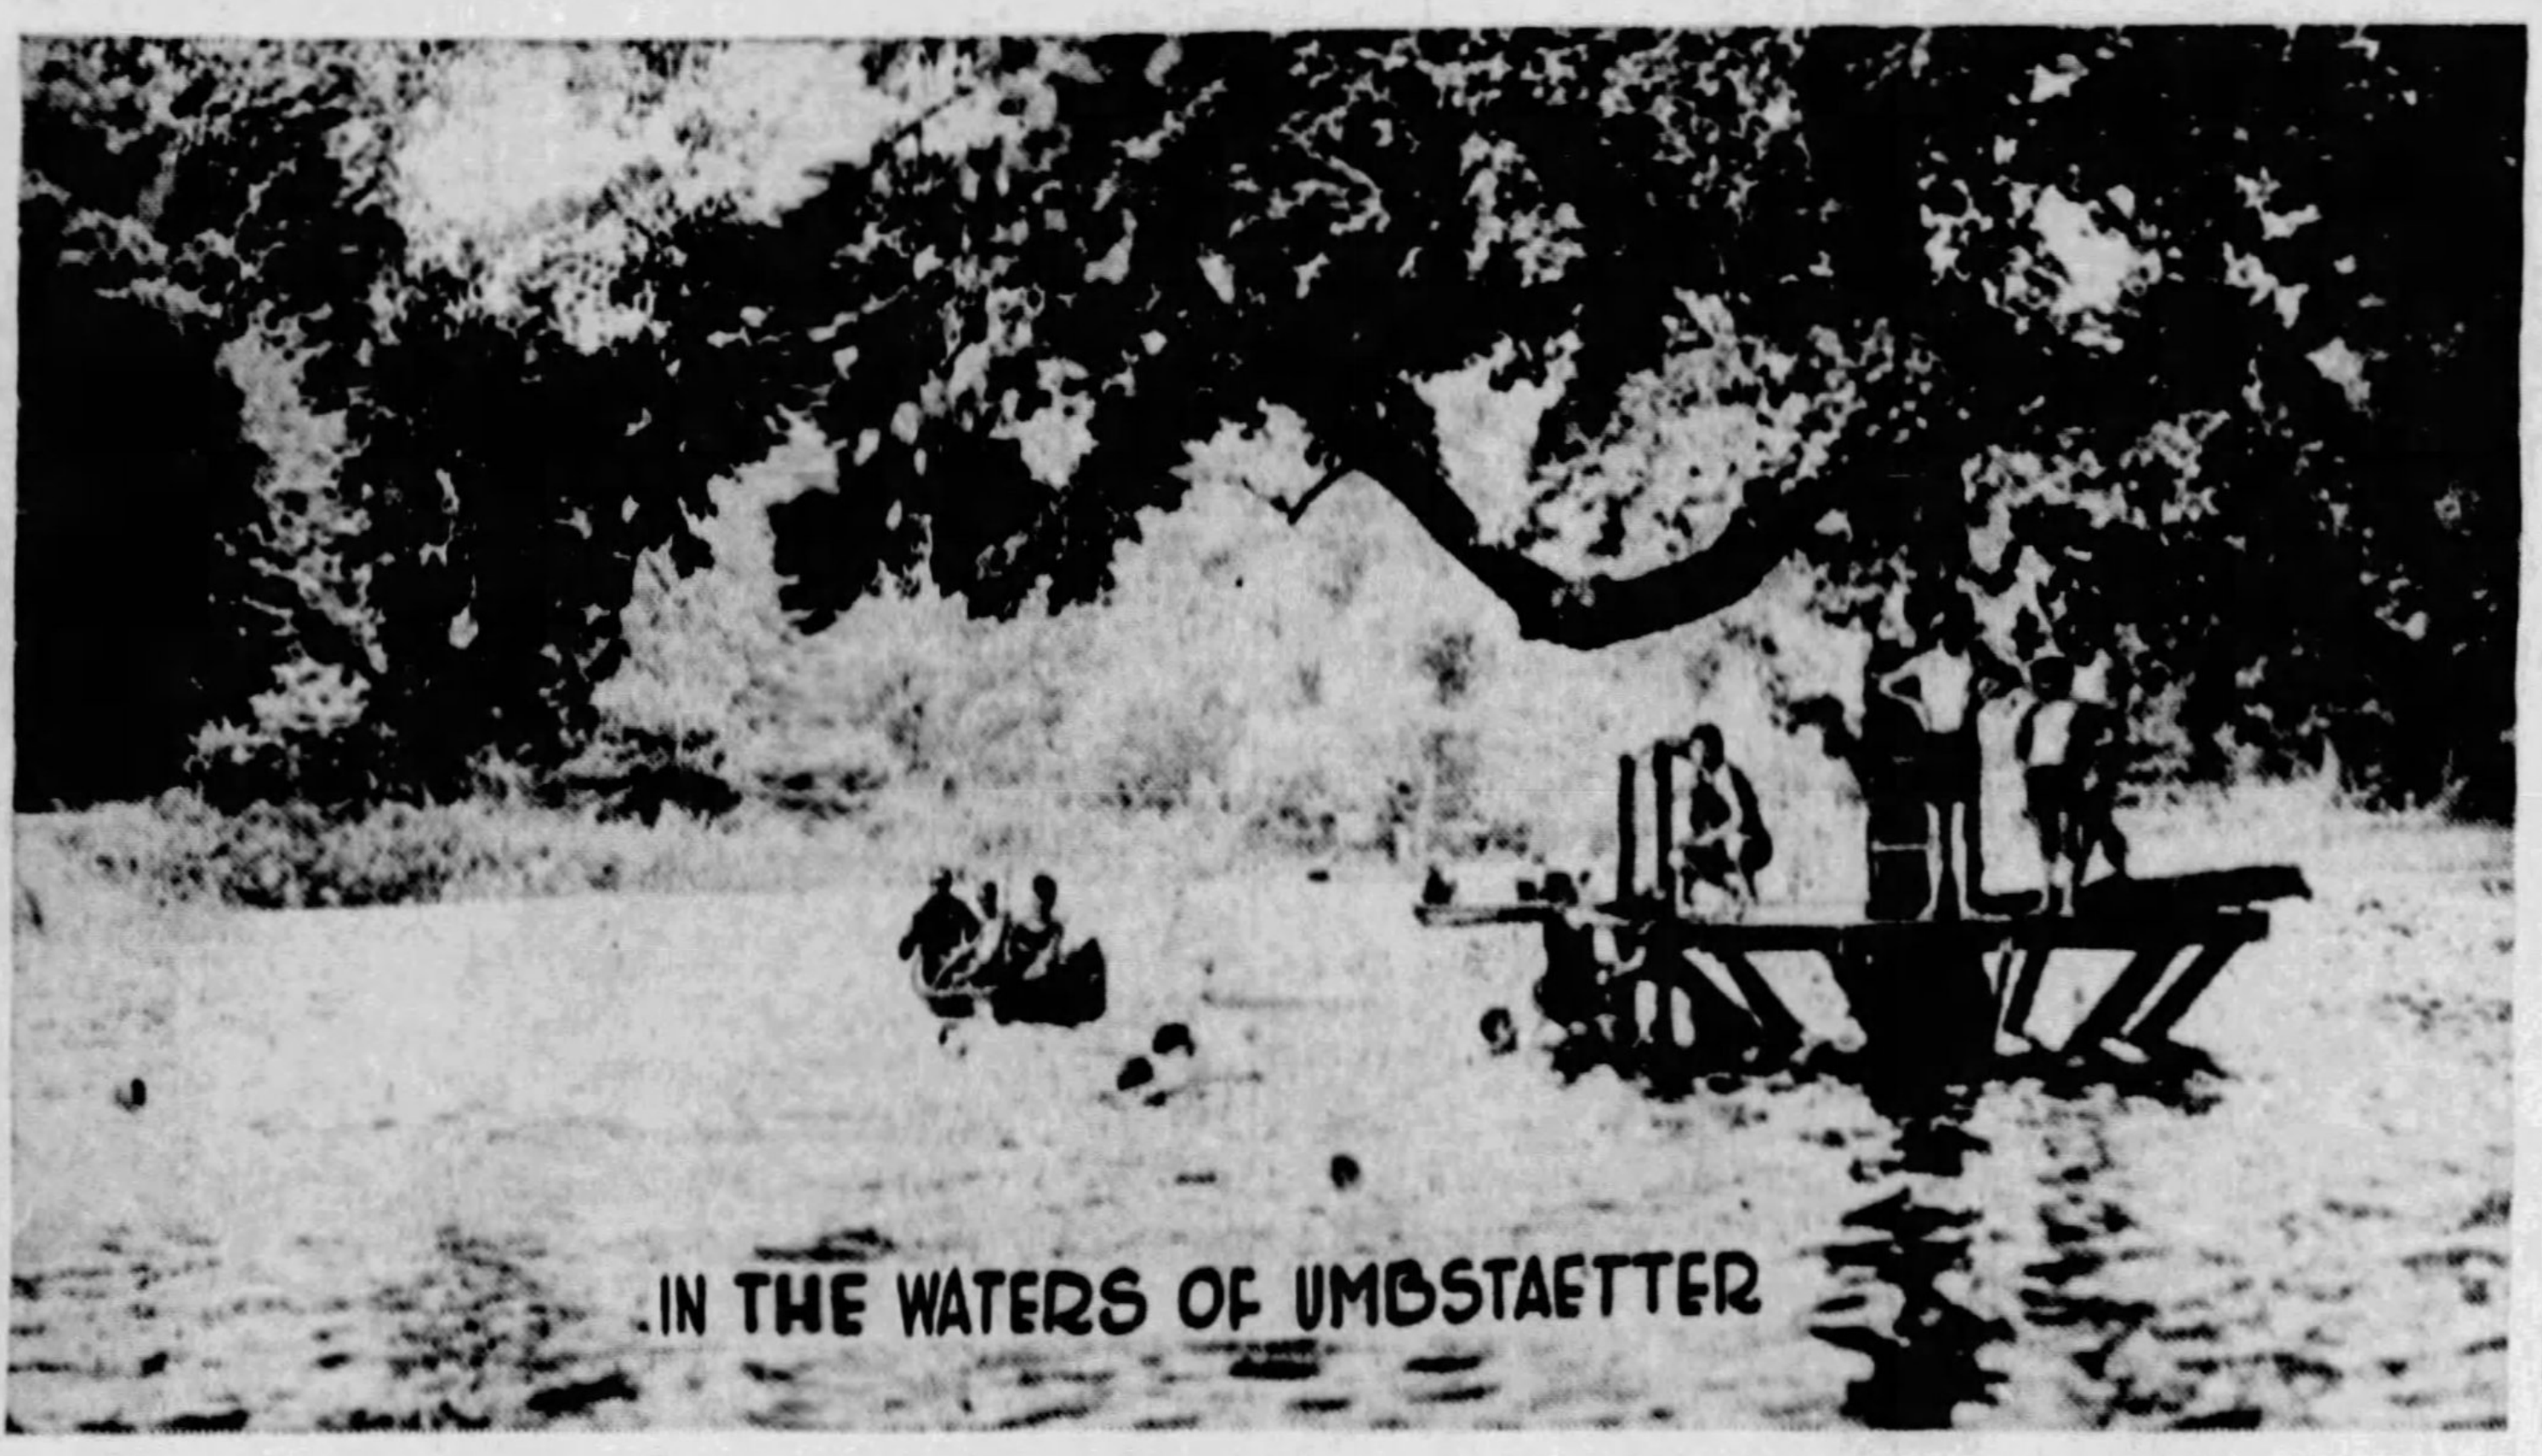
UMBSTAETTER -:- Boy Scouts Prepare for Summer at Camp -:- RESERVATION

ANNUAL

Boy Scouts of this area herald the coming of Monday. For then Camp Umbstaetter, Boy Scout reservation near Fair Oaks, Pa., opens for summer camping. This is a scene of one of the campfires around which Pittsburgh boys will sit in the next few months.



READY!

The swimming pond is all ready, broadcasts the executive offices to all the Boy Scouts in the district. This picture is a "quiet" moment at the camp last year, but many of the same boys will be back. The reservation each year takes care of many members of the organization and gives them opportunities to practice the woodlore they learn in their troop rooms.

INDIANS

Outdoor life, study and even a probing of history in which historical drama is re-enacted will make up a part of each boy's summer life during his stay at the camp. Here, Boy Scouts pow-wow as Indians of the bygone frontier days' tribal ceremonies.

Greta Garbo Chosen for Lead In Revised Movie Version of Edward Sheldon's Stage Play

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.

IT looks as though Greta Garbo will not enjoy the European vacation which she has been planning, for the plans of Metro include her appearance in a revised movie version of Edward Sheldon's stage play, "Romance." Doris Keane created the part which Greta will essay, playing it on the screen as well as in the theater.

The plot deals with the love of a preacher for an Italian opera singer. So the Swedish star had better brush up on her Italian if "Romance" is to be a sound picture. The screen adaptation is now in course of preparation, and everything will be set for production by the time Greta completes "A Woman of Affairs," which is the movie title for "The Green Hat."

Even the so-called "Independent" producers are joining the sound parade, and are planning to synchronized their product with one or another of the "squeakie" devices. Perhaps the first of the "Indies" to be released will be "The Girl From Argentine," a Gotham picture in which Carmel Myers will star.

Corinne Griffith will soon be seen on the screen in a role which Elsie Ferguson played upon the stage. Just as soon as the final shots for "The Divine Lady" have been taken, Corinne stars in "Outcast," under the direction of William A. Seiter, Laura La Plante's husband. Corinne's present picture deals with the romance of Admiral Lord Nelson and the beautiful Lady Hamilton. Oodles of "sea stuff" has been taken for the picture, including some naval battles which are reported as thrilling as any ever filmed.

It seems that almost every day some one discovers something new and interesting about Victor McLaglen. Vic is one of the most colorful soldiers of fortune in the cinema colony, his life being just one long list of adventures in half the countries of the world. Now I hear that he was once one of the Arno brothers, an aggregation of athletic vaudeville performers whose specialty was "Living Pictures." And some one who should know imparts the information that one of Vic's brothers is no less a figure than Fred McKaye. And if you don't know who Fred is, ask some member of the family interested in boxing. Fred is as far-famed as Steve Brodie, and for somewhat similar reasons.

Eddie Nugent, the prop boy who is now a featured Metro player, sort of lost track of his family in New York when he cut loose from home ties to follow a circus. But now that Eddie's bid for fortune has reached the stage where his name is in the paper, the press has proven its value by putting him in touch with the home folks. Eddie has received a letter from his sister, Mrs. Margaret Knoth, of Long Island City, and learns from it that he is twice an uncle since he went away.

One of the Hollywood sights, so odd, yet so familiar, is the taking of motion pictures right out in the streets. This or that corner is chosen for a location, or some apartment house or hotel entrance is selected for a certain scene, and down come actors, directors, cameramen, and the whole crew. They work just as unconcernedly as they would in the seclusion of a studio, and the natives are so used to seeing them that only the very smallest children pay the least attention.

Reginald Denny's home, thousands of feet up in the mountains, is one of the spots to which week-end invitations are always in demand. Reggie is in the way of being one of those "perfect hosts" one reads of. He has an immense estate with horses, cars and even airplanes, at the disposal of his guests, and he turns the place over to them to do as they will. Denny is English, and a goodly number of visiting Britons have their names in his guest book.

Clive Brook and Ronald Colman are two more Englishmen who maintain the traditions of the "Tight Little Isle," while they are on the foreign soil of Hollywood. Even the ritual of 4 o'clock tea is preserved, and Brook has the only grass tennis court in the colony.

THEATER BILLS NEXT WEEK

George Baxter will play the juvenile lead in "The Music Master" next week in the Pitt. Gus Forbes will play the title role, and Anne Forrest will have the leading feminine part.

The opening performance of "East Is West" in the Nixon takes place Monday with the Nixon Players in the parts that were played originally by Fay Bainter and her associates. There will be the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Marcia Byron plays the leading role in "The Captive," coming to the Gayety next week, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Vernon Steel is the leading man. Edouard Bourdet wrote the French play from which "The Captive" was adapted.

"The Thief in the Dark," the photoplay feature in the Davis, is a comedy mystery play, revealing the subterfuges used b a gang of sideshow crooks in committing crime, revealing some tricks used by fake mediums.

The new stage show booked for the Penn next week is called "Step This Way." It is R. H. Burnside's third Loew-Publix revue creation. Teddy Joyce, as master of stage and directing the Penn Stage Band, will head the presentation. On the screen will be John Gilbert in "The Cossacks."

Bert Lewis and a dozen others, in "All Aboard," is booked for the Stanley next week. Clara Bow, in "Ladies of the Mob," is to be the screen feature. Richard Arlen is the leading man.

Scargold, banjoist, a member of the Royal Mounted Police of Canada, is to be a feature in the Harris the first half of next week. The screen features will be "The Devil's Trade Mark" and Tom Mix in "Painted Posts."

Viola Dana will appear in person in the Sheridan Square the first half of next week in "There Goes the Bride." The two screen features will be Adolphe Menjou in "His Tiger Lady" and Louise Fazenda in "Five and Ten Cent Annie."

DEPARTMENT STORE EMPLOYES PICNIC

The annual picnic of Gimbel Bros.' department store is being held in Kennywood Park this afternoon. An athletic meet and ball game are among the diversions. Prominent on committees in charge of the outing are Karl Kaufmann, Clarissa M. Burkhart and James E. Graham. Billie Ritchie's Water Circus will appear twice in the big pool today and Sunday. There also will be four Sunday band concerts.

OUTINGS NEXT WEEK ON HOMER SMITH

The Catholic Daughters of America, Court of Allegheny, will hold their annual outing on the steamer Homer Smith Monday night. Franklin Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, has chartered the boat for Tuesday night. The Collegians will be on board Wednesday. The Non Silva Club will hold its outing Thursday. Lodge No. 151, Loyal Order of Moose, will be on the steamer Friday.

NATIVE-BORN STARS :-: FIND COMPETITION :-: FROM OTHER LANDS

Eva Von Berne, from Vienna, is an officer's daughter, so Hollywood sought to give her an appropriate welcome as she stepped off the train into the movie world. Miss Von Berne was "discovered" by Irving Thalberg while he and his bride, Norma Shearer, were abroad on their honeymoon.

Jose Crespo, Lupe Valez, Dolores Del Rio, Don Alvarado and Maria Alba are a few of the reasons why Mexico should be proud. The group was photographed after meeting at the studio where Miss Del Rio is working. What do you think they discussed? The bettering of Mexican music in Los Angeles.

The CONSTANT FLAME

by Winifred Van Duzer

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and Kitten are daugters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily has made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Kitten, Emily's sister, is going with a wild crowd and is running close to danger. Emily goes into partnership with Mrs. Haiden, Stella tells her that Skeets has deserted her. Kitten discovers that Ted is a chauffeur instead of a millionaire.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

KENT sat back, suddenly white. He hadn't heard that song in years; now it was like a clear, bright light turned in upon himself. It went piercing through the wordliness he had acquired, through the image of himself he had built up in his own mind; it showed the restlessness that had seized him the night he tried to propose to Marilee Grainger—the restlessness that overwhelmed him whenever he was near her—for what it was. Distaste. He didn't love Marilee; he never would and he couldn't marry her.

But there was a love deep in his heart. The light picked that out, revealed it to him.

He saw himself, a schoolboy, moving across a makeshift stage to a girl like a rose touched by moonlight. All in white, pale hair shimmering. He saw himself bend down swiftly, heard his own voice say, "Lord, you're sweet, Emmy! So white and sweet—little white flower—"

He saw, as in a picture, the girl grown older, luminous fairy creature in a garden; felt the warm fragrance of her lips as his own touched them.

Always he had held the thought of her, loving it, never suspecting till now when the very song that he, himself, had sung to her shocked him into realization.

He sprang up and began to pace back and forth.

"And when thyself with shining foot shall pass
Among the guests, star-scattered on the grass
And in thy joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made one, turn down an empty glass!"

The glorious voice softened and silenced on a high note. Kent threw out his arms muttering: "Lord! Supposing it had been too late—good Lord!—"

He snatched his hat and tore out of the house. Marilee and her aunt were coming as he dashed by; they called but he didn't see them. He turned his car toward Lyall.

What he intended to do he didn't know. Excepting that he wished to see Emily Day. He would drive up the hill, ask to speak to her. Perhaps she had forgotten him? Such a long time since they had met. Or perhaps she loved someone else?

That thought turned in his mind, leaving it blank. He brought his car to a crawling stop under the trees across the street from the Day home.

He heard voices on the porch. While he waited a big young fellow came to the top of the steps and descended, turning backward toward a girl who called to him gaily. The girl was Emily, slender and all in white, pale hair a-fluff in the glow of a lighted window. Kent recognized the man as Marty Nolan.

Long after Marty's footsteps had silenced down the street and Emily had gone in and closed the door he sat there.

So it was too late, he kept telling himself.

Nolan of all people! He felt very weary.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

STELLA was going to be married and she came over to ask if Emily would "stand up" with her.

"Tomorrow, Em," she said. "I wanted to wait for a dress but it doesn't matter. Father sits and broods. It's kind of awful." She wiped her eyes.

"Don't be so downcast, Stell dear. I'm sure it'll come out right."

"How can it? Father was almost insane when he went up to the Bradleys. They—they didn't know about Skeets; about how he is. They were going to disown him but father must have said something to stop that. He took his gun," she added, disconsolately. "You don't mind, Emmy? Standing up with me? If you do—"

Emily put her arms around the girl and they cried together a little. "You're my dear friend, Stella, and I'd feel terrible if you wouldn't let me. I wish just everything good for you. Smile now; don't let folks see you this way. Only a mistake; no use clinging to a mistake. Start in on a new life and forget the past."

"If only we could! Tomorrow then. Come early, Em."

So Emily helped the bride put on the ready-made dress she had bought at the Specialty Shop—white crepe with lace at the wrists and throat sewed in not too skilfully. And a pathetic little bunch of artificial orange blossoms at the waist.

Stella, with her eyes red, smiled over the brave makeshift just before they went down the stairs.

"I'm going to make him love me, Em. You think one could do that? When you love a man so much, so very much that you want to die for him, he's got to love you, hasn't he? With only a little chance—oh, I will! Do that—well, pray for me, Em."

Emily prayed in a blind fashion. "Somewhere out in the immensity—You who are love—give her a little chance. Don't let it all go for nothing, all this she feels—"

But down in the living room the air was charged as with terrific, opposing currents; it seemed to Emily that love could not live in that swirl of furious emotion.

Steve Brent, watchful and brooding; Mrs. Brent crying; Dottie wide-eyed and sullen. And Skeets waiting in a bored indifference.

He got up, slouching, and stood beside Stella while the clergyman began the marriage service in a matter-of-fact manner. And Emily, at Stella's left, felt a wild desire to cry out that it must stop; that nothing so violent could go on, constitute a sacrament.

She remembered dimly a line she had heard this same clergyman read once: "The cup of fury . . . They shall drink and be mad . . ."

Stella had done this; Stella and Skeets. Drunk the cup of fury and they were mad. . . .

"Stella, do you take this man, Theodore—"

The bride glanced up, startled. She hadn't even known his name!

Emily recalled another such case where the girl refused to marry the man who betrayed her because, as she said, she wasn't well enough acquainted with him for marriage. Grotesque it seemed then, but now Emily questioned if the girl were not more sane than this one trembling at her side.

Both had committed a grave error, but the other had refused to hold to that error for all time to come. That, maybe, was a stauncher thing to do.

Yet no third life was involved there . . .

"Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder—"

It was over. Stella's bag was carried out to the yellow roadster; she kissed her mother and Emily—glanced at her father, who didn't raise his head—went away with her husband.

(To Be Continued Monday.)

BUGS BAER Says

(Copyright, 1928.)

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

GOVERNMENT padlock dragoons have slapped official plasters on 20 New York night clubs.

Tex Guinan is the only lady in any world who has a lavaliere of padlocks.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Among famous clubs which were hermetically sealed by the law's wrong arm were the Golden Flea Bag and the Insomnia Gardens.

When asked whether or not she believed in the eighteenth amendment, Tex replied: "I am not superstitious."

The technical names for New York night clubs are Flea Bags, Drums and Traps. When you fine the proprietor of a drum one thousand dollars for selling a drink he still makes eleven dollars on the transaction.

But when you charge the boys for having alcohol in their possession, you are wrong. You might accuse them of selling carbolic juice without having a druggist's diploma or selling turpentine without belonging to the house painters' union. But there is no alcohol in the elixir of the goofs.

We would not care to be a prohibition volunteer in New York. Before you make an arrest you must buy liquor. In order to make sure it's liquor you must drink it. After you drink it you are not sure of anything.

One padlock, more or less, means little or zero to Tex. It's just a birthday present out of season.

And raiding a drum in summer time merely saves the proprietors the trouble of announcing they will be closed during June, July and August.

AGENTS RAID HOMES IN BRADDOCK DISTRICT

Federal prohibition agents swooped down on four places in Braddock last night. Seizures were reported made in each raid. The residences visited included dwellings in Tassey Hallow road and Belle avenue, both North Braddock, and homes in Pe[illegible] avenue and Halket street, Braddock.

What America's Most Eminent Neurologist Said of "THE CAPTIVE"
"While criticism of Bourdet's play should consider it first and foremost as a play, a work of art, a tragic drama, it must needs also take into consideration the comment which has arisen in many quarters relegating it to the pornographic and salacious, thus classifying it with that group of presentations that are bringing the stage into disrepute. The stupidity and injustice of this attitude need special consideration to the end that a real work of art shall not be misjudged and lost as the result of passing misapprehension."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WANTED: A BABY

By ERIC HEATH

"I'M just going to do it! I don't care! I don't care if people think I'm crazy."

Miriam Fordhill gazed thoughtfully at her reflection in the little cracked mirror above the kitchen sink. She sighed, and went on washing the few dishes she had used in preparing her supper.

"No man would marry a girl as ugly as I am," she mused as she splashed the warm suds in the pan. "It's not that I long to be beautiful, or anything like that. If I could only be fairly nice looking, I'd be satisfied. But I'm—well, I'm a perfect fright, that's all!"

Although no one could have called Miriam Fordhill pretty, she was far from being a "perfect fright."

Her father had died when she was still a child, and she had lost her mother, an invalid for years, when she was 18. Now, at 24, she was beginning to feel, even more keenly than ever, the loneliness of her life.

She had always, as far back as she could remember, wanted to have a baby of her own, had dreamed of having one until the realization had dawned on her that she would probably never marry.

The irony of the situation lay in the fact that her mother had left her a fairly comfortable fortune. She could easily have afforded to bring up a child or even two children.

And then a solution had occurred to her. Why not adopt a baby?

With trembling fingers, she opened the evening paper. A slow flush spread over her face as she saw her ad topping the personal column: "WANTED: Baby; young woman in moderate circumstances will give good home and mother's care to needy child. Full adoption desired!" Following the ad her address was given.

"I wonder if anyone will answer it tonight?" she thought. And then: "Suppose there isn't any baby for me here in town?"

Almost convinced that her attempt had been foolish and futile, she picked up a magazine and tried to read. But after a few minutes she flung it down, and began to pace restlessly in the living room of her tiny cottage.

"What a nice big back yard for a kiddie to play in, she thought, and what a nice porch. And I could fix up the spare room with a little crib and—Oh! I simply must stop thinking . . ." she caught herself up sharply. "I'd better go out and take a walk. I don't know what's the matter with me . . . I'm all jumpy."

She got her hat and jacket and started through the little front garden. She paused to examine one of the flower beds.

She was straightening up, about to go on, when she heard the click of the old-fashioned front gate, and looked over quickly. A tall figure was entering, leading a little tot by the hand.

When she was a little distance away, the man said:

"I'm looking for the lady who advertised—for a baby. I think her house is out this road. Can you tell me . . . ?"

"Yes. This is the right place," Miriam managed to reply. "Is—is this the baby?"

"Yes. He is two and a half. Is that age all right?"

"Oh, it doesn't matter so much about the age. But I'd rather have one that's two and a half."

"What a dear little fellow!" she exclaimed. "What is his name?"

"Peter. Will that do?"

"I've always liked that name. And you're—you're—"

"I'm his father. His mother is dead."

"Oh!" Miriam looked up at the man. His face was turned away, but she was surprised at his appearance of strength and youth. He was certainly not more than 27, and he looked as though he were in perfect health.

"You . . ." she began, and then, deciding that she must know the truth, she blurted, "You—you don't want him?"

The question seemed to sting the man to the quick. He made a brusque movement.

"I can't bear to give him up," he replied. "But I want him to have a decent home, and—care. I can't give them to him. I can't even make a living for both of us, and so—when my neighbor read the ad in the paper to me, I thought it was my duty to come to you."

Miriam looked at him closely. It was not until then that she knew he was blind.

"I lost my sight in the war," he went on, in a colorless voice. "And I'm only able to peddle things, and pick up odd jobs now and then. I'm not good for anything else."

He said this as a matter of fact, and without bitterness in his voice. Miriam felt a little clutch at her heart.

"But you!" she cried. "You need someone to look after you, too!"

"Oh, I can manage to waggle along," he declared. "But I don't want the boy to suffer. And that ad—well, there was something about it that made me feel confident I was doing right in coming to you. I wouldn't be afraid to—to leave the youngster with you."

Miriam looked earnestly into his frank, boyish face.

"I'm—I'm so sorry," she began, but he broke in with:

"Oh, please don't! It's the boy I'm worried about. I tried to make out, for both of us, but I couldn't make a go of it."

"No wonder," she murmured.

"Do you think you will want to take him?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes," she answered. "But there's one thing I have to tell you first."

"What is it?" he prompted, when she did not go on.

"I want you to know," she said bravely, "That I am very homely. I have green eyes and—" She stopped, surprised at hearing him laugh. "There's nothing funny about it," she reproved.

"But there is!" he contradicted. "Why, you're—" he fumbled for a word, and finally said it, flushing. "—beautiful."

"No, please!" she cried. "I want you to know the truth, because it might make a difference. I have green eyes—"

"There's no use telling me that," he replied gravely, "because I know. "Since I've been blind, I've been able to see—well—I suppose you might say, with my heart. And that's the best sight, I think."

A tear trickled down Miriam's cheek. To hide her emotion, she took the baby's hand in hers.

"I want you both to come in," she said. "We'll have a little party—to celebrate."

She seemed to be walking in a dream as she led them into the cottage. No one had ever called her "beautiful" before. She was thinking, too, that no home could be complete without a "father," as well as a mother, and she began to wonder. . . .

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Former Pittsburgh Woman, Now Noted Singer, Sails From London for Visit to Her Homeland

I AM quite sure that there are lots of Pittsburghers who will be interested to know that a former well-known local woman, widely known as a singer, is going to make her first visit here in 20 years within a short time. She is now Mrs. Frederick G. Hawdon, but she will be remembered best, I think, as Etta C. Keil.

Mrs. Hawdon lives in Berkhamsted, England, now, and I understand that she sailed last Saturday on the Samaria for a visit to her homeland. She expects to go first to Philadelphia where her brother, Augustus G. Keil, lives, and she will visit him for a while. Later on, Mrs. Hawdon will come to Pittsburgh, although no definite time has been set for her arrival here. She will be the guest of Miss M. Marsh Rees, of South Negley avenue, during her stay in Pittsburgh. And since she was more or less in public life when she lived here, Mrs. Hawdon has hosts of old friends in the city who will be more than glad to welcome her home again.

AND still they are going abroad! Two more names added to the list of Pittsburghers who will spend the summer in Europe are Mrs. George L. Collord and her daughter, Laura, of Morewood avenue. They sailed on Wednesday, I hear, on the Homeric, and will spend some time abroad.

THE first week of July has seen vast numbers of our local people leaving town, as is usually the case, of course. Among the large group sailing for Europe are Mrs. F. E. Mesta, Mrs. D. A. Foster, Mrs. H. F. Devens, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Mossman, J. H. Weibly, Senator and Mrs. David Aiken Reed, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Schellentrager and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hansen, all of whom live at the Schenley apartments.

A great many other residents of the apartments have gone to their summer places. The Reuben Millers are at Beaumaris, in Canada, and I believe I mentioned before that Mrs. Scott McKeown and her children are at their summer home at Stoneboro. Mrs. J. J. Flannery has gone out to her summer place at Oakmont, and both Mrs. J. M. Milliken and Mrs. R. N. Ehrhart are at Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McKee are spending the month in Maine, I understand, while Mrs. E. W. Murdoch and her family are at Conneaut Lake for the entire summer. Mrs. J. S. McKelvey has gone down south to Pinehurst, and Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Reif are at their summer home at Cedarsville, Mich. Mrs. Henry H. Hornbostel and her son and daughter-in-law, the Caleb Hornbostels, are sailing this month for Europe, too, and the H. H. Gardiners are at Yarmath, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hurd are at Virginia Beach, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. O'Blenness are at their cottage at Manitowaning, Ontario.

CHAUTAUQUA CLAIMS PITTSBURGH WOMEN

CHAUTAUQUA is claiming its usual quota of Pittsburgh club women this summer. Many of them are in attendance at the institute on international relations and were present at the opening of the Chautauqua Women's Club last Monday, when Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt delivered the address on "Women Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." A number of local club women are members of the Chautauqua Club which has sessions five afternoons each week of the six weeks' season. Mrs. A. F. B. Morris, Mrs. Frank G. Kelsey, Mrs. C. V. Van Winkle and Mrs. J. C. McDowell, of the Pittsburgh Chautauqua Alumni, are settled in their cottages for the summer and Mrs. Royal F. McAdams, also a Chautauquan and a member of the Coraopolis Civic Club, has as her guest her sister, Miss C. L. Heiber. Mrs. S. R. McClure and Mrs. J. Andrew Gettig, both past presidents of the Braddock Woman's Club, are also at the Assembly Grounds, the former occupying her cottage on Cookman avenue and the latter stopping at the St. Elmo and taking the course of journalism at the summer school. Mrs. Rollins A. Haddock, president of the East Liberty Woman's Club, has opened her cottage on Miller avenue, but will return to town for a board meeting next week. Mrs. C. C. Roberts, of the Dormont New Century Club, has taken a cottage on Miller avenue for the season and Mrs. L. C. Edgar, of the Swissvale Woman's Club, has her family with her on Lake Drive.

SOMETHING rather new in the way of club events was the luncheon given yesterday by the Woman's Club of Crafton at the Food Craft Shop in Fifth avenue as a benefit for the clubhouse fund. Prior to the luncheon Miss Verna Arnold gave an interesting talk on cooking methods, kitchen equipment and refrigeration, and followed luncheon with an informative food talk. Mrs. Val E. Schott, the new president, had as her guest Mrs. Finley Weisenberger, the junior president, and Mrs. A. D. Robb, the retiring head, entertained her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Walker Robb, of Chicago, and Mrs. Robert Walsh, of Crafton. Mrs. Grace McKenzie, accompanied by Mrs. N. D. Brant, gave a program of soprano solos and there also were numbers on a reproducing piano. The clubhouse committee, headed by Mrs. Sherman Massinghom and Mrs. Albert Graham, had charge of the affair. The committee includes, in addition to the chairman and subchairman, Mrs. H. L. Smith, Mrs. E. V. Carothers, Mrs. M. G. Roberts, Mrs. C. E. Schinneller, Mrs. L. W. Poster, Mrs. H. M. German, Mrs. W. K. Foster, Mrs. H. G. Willetts, Mrs. Harry Hershberger, Mrs. C. V. Horne, Mrs. Meade McDonald and Mrs. Paul N. McMahon.

COMMUNITY vesper services under auspices of the Women's Community Association will be conducted tomorrow night on the lawn of the Brighton Road Presbyterian Church by the pastor, the Rev. R. H. Allen. The association members are to meet at the John Morrow School at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning for their picnic which will be held at Walters Grove, North County Park.

SOMETHING unusual in the way of picnics has been planned for the one which the women's section of the Regular Republican Organization of Dormont will give Monday at Rodgers Flying Field. Flights will be made before luncheon and bridge will be played in the afternoon. Mrs. Pierre DeBacker, of Glenmore avenue, is taking reservations.

COURT CONSUELO, Catholic Daughters of America, will have but one meeting this month. It will be held on the seventeenth. July 21 is set for the court's basket picnic at Green Grove, South Park.

SCHENLEY COURT, No. 34, Order of the Amaranth, will hold a card party in Serbian Hall, Fifth avenue, on Monday evening. The committee in charge includes Mrs. Mariam Smith, Mrs. Sophia Hirschmann, Mrs. Elizabeth Gill, Mrs. Vietta Johns and Mrs. Beatrice Kaufmann.

* * *

MRS. EMMA M'DONALD, district deputy of the Women's Benefit Association, will be hostess at a luncheon and card party at the Food Craft Shop, Fifth avenue, on Thursday.

SHOP FIRE IMPERILS DOGS AND MONKEYS

More than a score of dogs, many of them valuable, and several monkeys had narrow escapes from asphyxiation last night during a fire in the Paris Pet shop, 6315 Frankstown avenue. A pedestrian sounded an alarm and firemen arrived before the blaze had gained much headway. Damage was about $100.

"KIDS" ARTIST DUE MONDAY

Pittsburgh kiddies, and their parents, too, have a treat in store for them next week when Ad Carter, The Sun-Telegraph cartoonist, originator of "Just Kids Safety Clubs" will come here to remain all week.

Mr. Carter, who is coming primarily to talk to parents about the safety of children, wired The Sun-Telegraph that he would arrive, with Mrs. Carter, Monday morning. He will stay at the William Penn Hotel.

At noon Monday Mr. Carter will speak at the meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council directors at the Congress of Women's clubs. In the afternoon he will address 3,000 street car operators at the Homewood barns of the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Tuesday he will speak before 100 delegates to a conference in the State Department of Labor and Industry and Tuesday evening he will speak before the safety council of the Portland Cement Association.

Good Living Habits First Thing Needed

AFTER a severe illness, particularly prolonged fever, it is not at all uncommon for the victim to pull through, thin as a rail. But when there has been no such illness, we must look further for the reason.

What does it mean if we begin to lose weight? We always look upon pronounced emaciation as a sure sign of disease, but what disease.

You need not be fat in order to have good health. You need not be reasonably plump. You may be extremely thin and yet be perfectly well. It is the losing in weight which disturbs us.

Sometimes the loss of weight has gone on for months and perhaps nobody has noticed it. Sometimes the face retains its usual roundness long after the limbs and body have grown very thin. It is not until the vest or waistband becomes conspicuously loose that you awaken to the fact that your surplus flesh is melting.

The hands, particularly the backs of the hands, show the decline in flesh. The bones stand out because the fat between them has disappeared.

If you have been well nourished or fat and begin to lose weight, you should seek the cause. This is not a simple undertaking. It may be extremely difficult to locate the reason.

Unless the loss in weight can be readily traced to some definite cause, there are several possibilities which must be considered. The first thing to think about is whether or not you are the victim of some form of infection.

Bad teeth or gums, diseased tonsils, infected nasal sinuses, kidney involvement, digestive disturbance, disease of the bladder or neighboring parts — these are among the possibilities. It is well to see about this at once if you discover you are continuing to lose weight.

Diabetes and kidney disease are among the ailments which may cause the flesh to disappear. A test of the urine should be included in the thorough examination you are to have. This may show that the kidneys are out of order, or that the body is not handling as it should its intake of sugar.

It is a good idea to have the blood tested too. This may help the doctor to decide what is wrong with you. The quality of the blood is of the greatest importance.

Malignant disease, fortunately, is not the most common of the causes for emaciation, but it must be thought of if some less serious ailment is not found. Disease of the stomach may not amount to anything more than slight ulceration, but if it turns out to be malignant disease of that vital organ, loss of flesh is very certain to result.

By eating the proper amounts of the right foods, practicing the rules of personal hygiene, giving yourself recreation, and keeping your mind in a state of peace and happiness, you are likely to escape all the conditions which make for bad health and loss in weight. It is easy to say this, but actually to establish the right manner of living means self-denial. When your good habits have become second nature you will go on, year after year, and never know an ache or a pain. You will be plump and fair to look upon. Try it and see.

WIFE INSURANCE

MOST men have the "Wish-I-hadn't-marrieds," these days.

That faraway look in your husband's eyes, as he sits placidly smoking on the piazza, after dinner, may mean that he is figuring out a "big deal"—or it may mean only that he is wondering what "the boys are doing now."

There are ultra-marine moments, when even the most happily married man or woman is attacked with that "Wish-I-hadn't-married" feeling.

HELEN ROWLAND

George thinks that he's being cheated. If he had his life to live over again, he wouldn't marry the best woman on earth. No sirree! He'd squeeze all the fun there IS out of life! Travel, adventure—freedom from responsibility! THAT'S the life!

Think of the good times he might be having now on the money he's made! On the money he's spent on baby shoes, life insurance, spring millinery, garden seeds, washing machines, house paint, feminine frills, dining-room furniture, doctor's bills and dahlia bulbs!

Good times, doing WHAT, Georgie?

Good times knocking around the world in hotels, living on canned vegetables and "ginning" away your loneliness?

Good times acquiring headaches and gout and neuritis and avoirdupois? Or being mulcted by gold-diggers, fooled by flappers and kidded by cuties?

Good times playing at life—instead of LIVING?

No, dear boy, it's just a false alarm—that "Wish-I-hadn't-married" feeling!

Every man needs WIFE-INSURANCE!

A wife is a responsibility—she gives a man something to work for. She may be an incentive—or only a goad; but she is an anchor that keeps him right there on the job! Without a wife, no man would have "all that money" he thinks he might have spent on something more profitable.

A wife is the propeller that keeps a man in the straight and narrow way, when he might wobble all over the downward path. She is the shock-absorber that saves him all the little jolts and petty annoyances of life; the emergency brake that saves him from wreckage when he is going too fast or has lost control of his steering gear.

A wife, a home and a family ORIENTATE a man! They give him his proper relations to the Cosmos. A bachelor is about as useless and meaningless as one left-hand glove. He is no part of the scheme of things—and he FEELS it!

Marriage is no heavenly rest—no Dream of Alnaschar. But single life is only half a life. And half a life is worse than none!

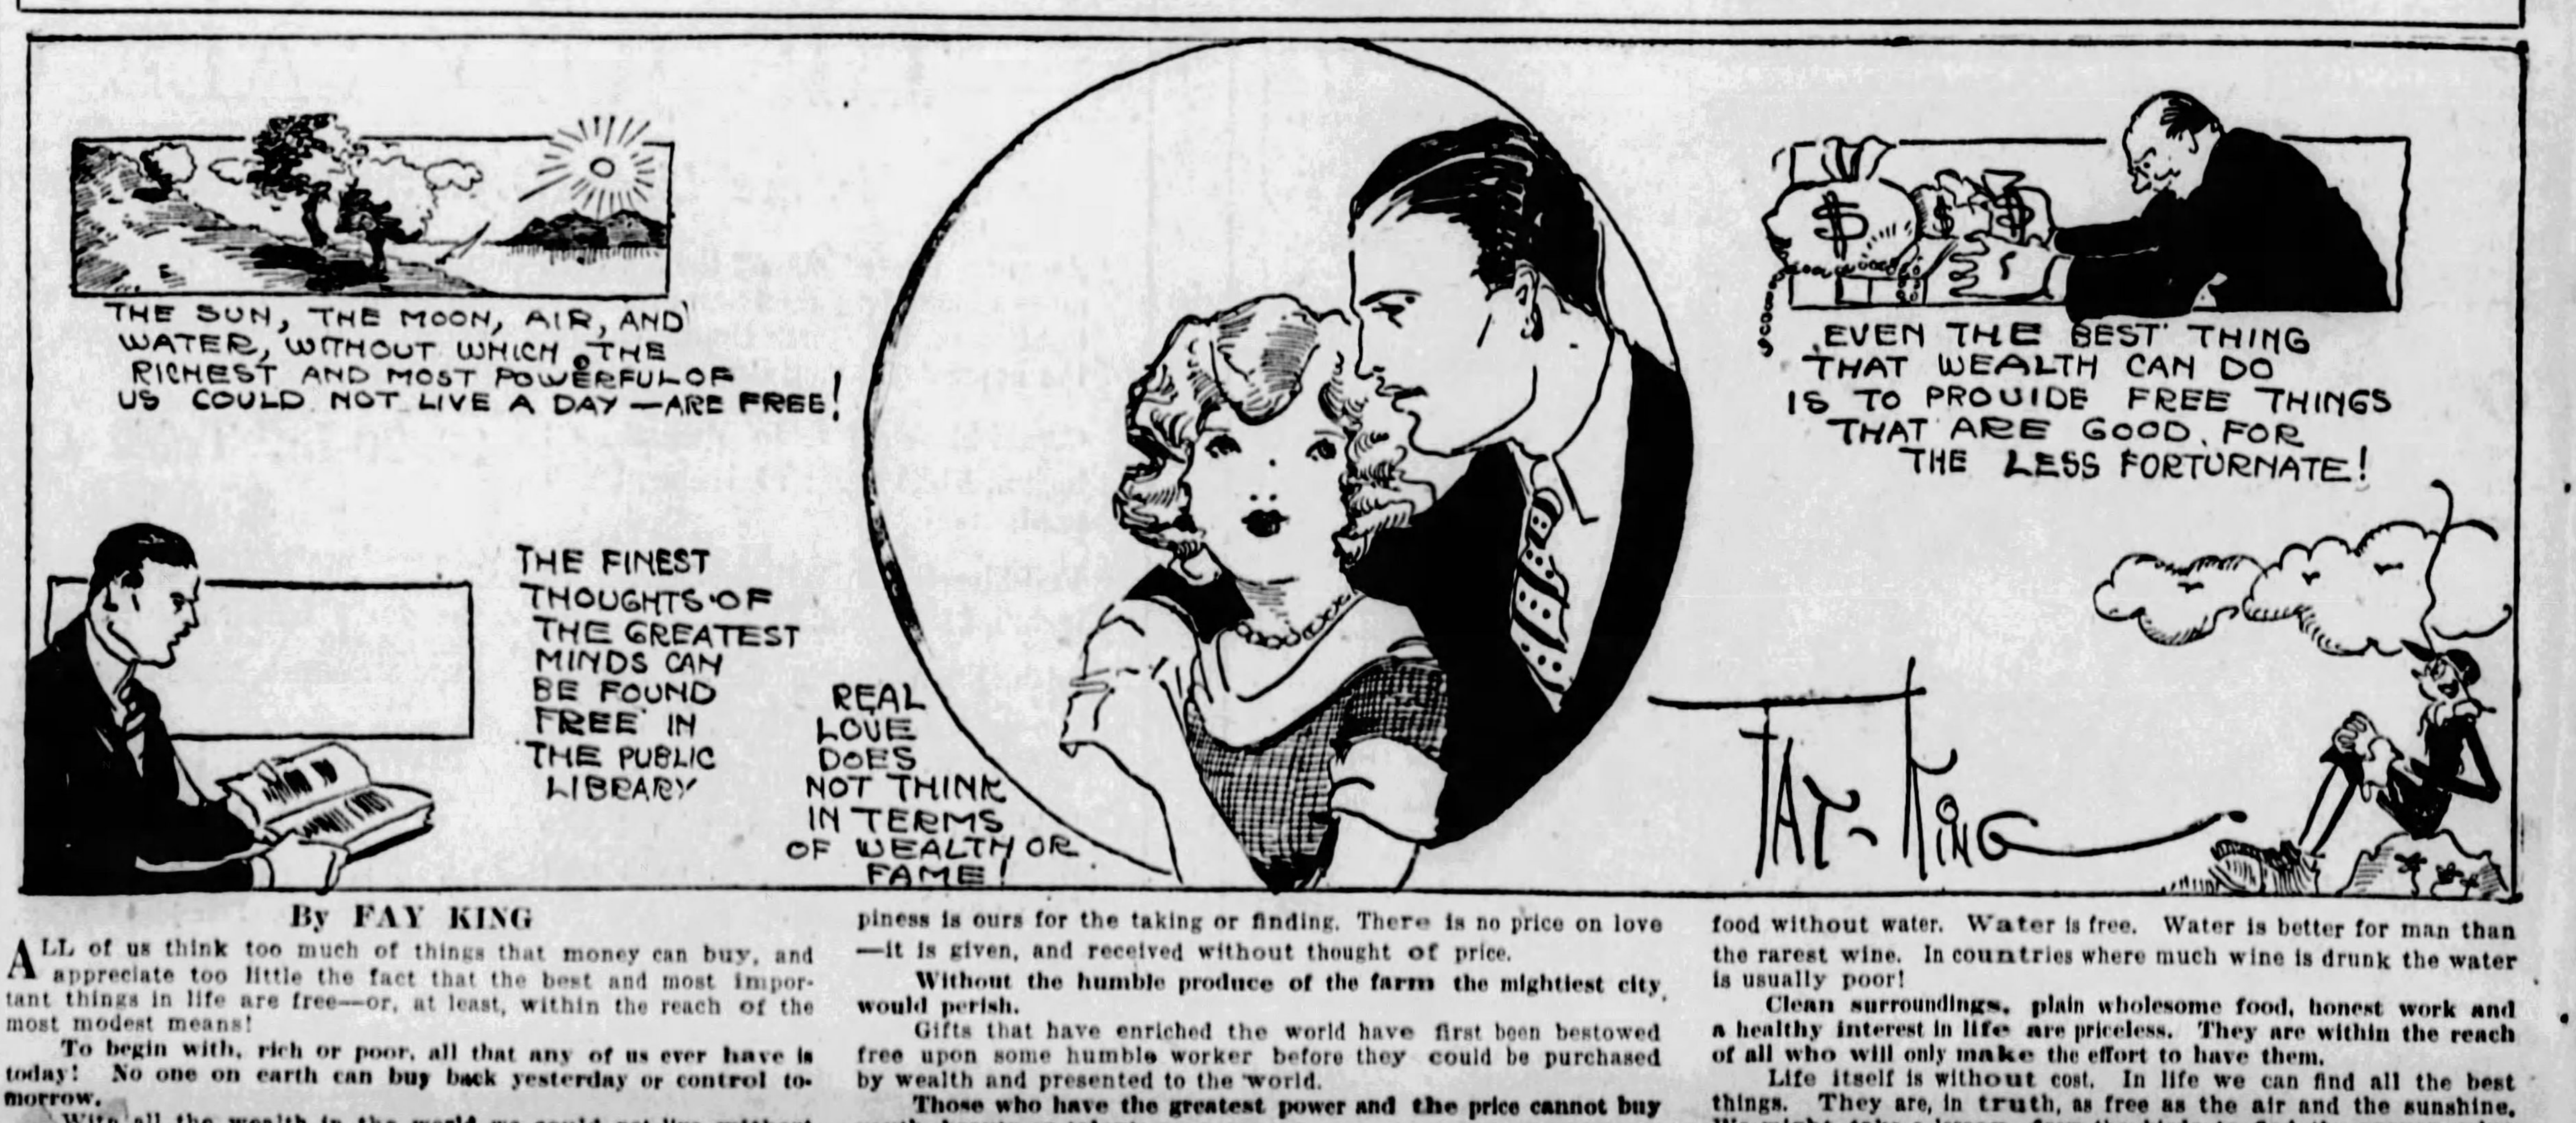
Fay King Finds "Best Things in Life Are Free"



THE SUN, THE MOON, AIR, AND WATER, WITHOUT WHICH THE RICHEST AND MOST POWERFUL OF US COULD NOT LIVE A DAY —ARE FREE!
EVEN THE BEST THING THAT WEALTH CAN DO IS TO PROVIDE FREE THINGS THAT ARE GOOD, FOR THE LESS FORTURNATE!
THE FINEST THOUGHTS OF THE GREATEST MINDS CAN BE FOUND FREE IN THE PUBLIC LIBRARY
REAL LOVE DOES NOT THINK IN TERMS OF WEALTH OR FAME!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

ALL of us think too much of things that money can buy, and appreciate too little the fact that the best and most important things in life are free—or, at least, within the reach of the most modest means!

To begin with, rich or poor, all that any of us ever have is today! No one on earth can buy back yesterday or control tomorrow.

With all the wealth in the world we could not live without air and sunlight, nor can we sway the tides as can the moon. Happiness is ours for the taking or finding. There is no price on love —it is given, and received without thought of price.

Without the humble produce of the farm the mightiest city would perish.

Gifts that have enriched the world have first been bestowed free upon some humble worker before they could be purchased by wealth and presented to the world.

Those who have the greatest power and the price cannot buy youth, beauty, or talent.

Man can live longer on water without food than he can on food without water. Water is free. Water is better for man than the rarest wine. In countries where much wine is drunk the water is usually poor!

Clean surroundings, plain wholesome food, honest work and a healthy interest in life are priceless. They are within the reach of all who will only make the effort to have them.

Life itself is without cost. In life we can find all the best things. They are, in truth, as free as the air and the sunshine. We might take a lesson from the birds to find the proper value of the best things which are ours for the taking.

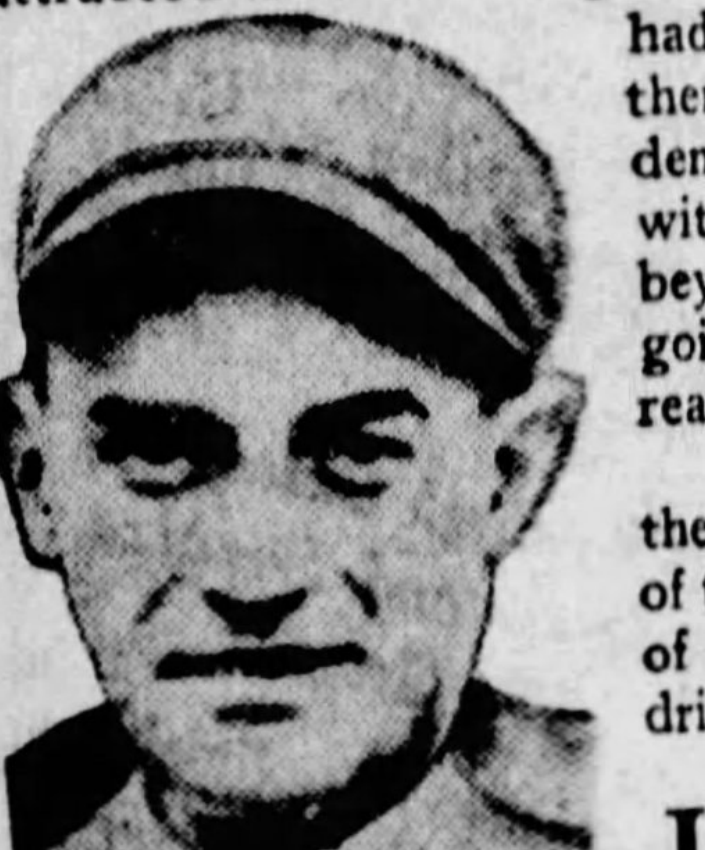
Four Star Pitchers Who Were Holdouts Make Sorry Showing—Munroe's Death Recalls Fistic Furore He Caused 25 Years Ago. Giants Have Biggest Battery in Baseball. Umpires Missing Again.

STANDING out beyond all the other holdouts in the major leagues last spring were four pitchers of wide renown who attracted more of the public's attention than all the rest. They had spurned the contracts proffered them by their respective clubs and were demanding new and sky-high terms with all the assurance of men who knew beyond peradventure that they were going to be worth that much more by reason of improved pitching.



Urban Shocker

One of them was Urban Shocker of the Yankees; another was Charley Root of the Cubs; another was Pete Donohue of the Reds, and the fourth was Vic Aldridge of the Giants.

JUST how far it is possible for a pitcher to be wrong in an estimate of his own ability may be judged from the showing that the four men named above have made to date.

Shocker has pitched only two innings for the Yankees since the season opened and has just been unconditionally released.

Root has won only five games against 11 lost and has lost his last seven games in succession.

Donohue has won only two games against five defeats, has lost his last five games in a row and is now laid up with a sore arm.

ALDRIDGE was a month late in reporting and though he is credited with three games won against one lost; he has been taken out of several other games and has pitched only 64 innings all told.

The combined records of the four holdouts to date is 11 games won and 17 lost, and one of the flingers has been released without his employers being able to get even the waiver price on him.

Yielding to holdouts is just one of the gambles the club owners have to take.

THE passing of Jack Munroe, fighter, prospector, soldier and miner, whose body was found in his cabin at Royon, Ont., yesterday, recalls to Queensberry fandom the days a quarter of a century ago when Munroe flashed across the fistic firmament like a meteor and was hailed as the possible new heavyweight champion. He became famous overnight when he stayed four rounds with Champion Jim Jeffries at Butte, Mont., on December 19, 1902, at a time when Jeff was touring the country offering to stop any opponent in that number of rounds. Munro's friends claimed a victory and the title for him on the strength of his performance.

Jack Munroe

THE bout with Jeffries kept Jack in the spotlight for almost a year, and he did not enter the ring again until November 7, 1903, when he knocked out Peter Maher in four rounds at Philadelphia. Then after beating Al Limerick at Boston by the knockout route on December 18, 1903, Munroe pulled some more big time stuff by facing Tom Sharkey for six rounds, no decision, at Philadelphia, on January 27, 1904.

This led to his being matched with Jeffries again, and this time the champion put an end to Jack's titular boom by knocking him out in two rounds at San Francisco, August 26, 1904.

THE only topnotcher met by Munroe after that was Jack Johnson, with whom he boxed six rounds in Philadelphia, on June 26, 1905.

Other men fought by Munroe during his ring career, were Charles Millward, John Gavin, Bill Rodenback (who won the amateur heavyweight championship of the United States in Pittsburgh and then turned professional), Hank Griffin, Jack Shaughnessy, Tom Mulvihill, Charles Stokes, Doc Payne of Cleveland, Hank Pardello, Tom Murphy and Alf Allen.

Munroe served with distinction during the World War from 1914 to 1918. Though often referred to as a Canadian, he was not only an American but a Pennsylvanian, as he was born in Chester, this state, June 21, 1877.

ONE of the best laugh-getters of the baseball season is the yarn from New York that at last the Yankee owners have consented to quit adding strength to their club for the good of the league, and out of a spirit of philanthropy consented to give up their claim to Second Baseman Reese and Shortstop Lary of the Oakland Club in the Pacific Coast League.

Miller Huggins

The Yanks contracted to pay something like $125,000 and a flock of players for the pair, but now offer to cancel the deal so that some other American League club may get the valuable players as a move toward keeping future races from being one-sided.

IT looks like a self-sacrifice on paper, if you don't care to go any deeper into the matter. But if you take a peep at the Coast League averages you will discover that Lary is hitting only .225 and Reese only .221.

No major league club would give any consideration to coast

SPANISH GIRL IS BEATEN, 6-2, 6-3

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 7. — (AP.) — Helen Wills, American tennis star, retained her championship in the women's singles at Wimbledon today, defeating Senorita Elia De Alvarez, brilliant young Spanish player before a huge crowd which included the King and Queen. The score was 6-2, 6-3.

The Spanish girl made a wonderful effort in the second set and had a three-love lead before the champion steadied and ran out six straight games.

Senorita Alvarez, who has been suffering from an attack of laryngitis, seemed anything but a sick girl as she extended Miss Wills to a greater effort than she has been forced to exert before this year.

The challenger exhibited a faultless backhand and sent many low, raking shots skimming past the nets, until the middle of the second set when her game suffered a collapse.

Point score of the Wills-Alvarez match:

First set:
Wills ....4 2 7 1 4 4 6 4—32
Alvarez ....1 4 5 4 2 1 4 2—23

Second set:
Wills ....0 2 2 4 5 4 4 6 4—31
Alvarez ....4 4 4 1 3 0 1 4 0—21

Miss Wills scored 63 points and won 12 games while Senorita Alvarez scored 44 points and won five games.

WATSON-SAUNDERS WIN

Mrs. Holcroft Watson and Miss P. Saunders won the women's doubles championship by defeating Misses Ermyntrude Harvey and Eileen Bennett, 6-2, 6-3.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Coney Island—Ray Miller knocked out Sid Terris, 1 round; Sergt. Sammy Baker knocked out Nick Palmer, 7 rounds.

GREENVILLE, S. C., July 7.—Deacon Joliff, Greenville pitcher in the Eastern Carolina League, yesterday pulled an iron man stunt in pitching two victories against Fayetteville, 15 to 8 and 7 to 1. Besides, he got five hits out of seven trips to the plate, three of them being home runs.

MANDELL, O'DONNELL FIGHT IS POSTPONED

JANESVILLE, Wis., July 7.—(AP.)—The 10-round bout between Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight boxing champion, and Johnny O'Donnell of St. Paul, scheduled for July 17 has been indefinitely postponed. The bout will take place sometime after the Tunney-Heeney engagement in New York July 26.

JAVELIN MARK FALLS

LONDON, July 7.—The world record for the javelin throw was broken in the British Amateur Athletic championships today when S. A. Lay, of New Zealand, pitched the staff 220 feet and 9 inches. Previously the British discus record had been broken by E. Paulus, Germany, with a throw of 147 feet.

PIRATES BEATEN IN SERIES OPENER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

AS the McGraw hosts made ready for their double clash with the Pirates this afternoon they were an ambitious bunch of athletes. Winning over the Pirates yesterday while the league-leading Cardinals remained idle, the Polo Grounders are within two games of the top.

As a rule, however, the Giants find the highways on this side of the Alleghenies rougher than the "Rocky Road to Dublin," although the Gotham boys didn't slow up much in their first contest of the series with the Pirates. But theirs is a hard road just the same, for they will find plenty of fighting in St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago.

The Giants looked like a dangerous ball club as they won, 11 to 7 over the Pirates, but anybody who was there, including Manager McGraw, himself will tell you that the New Yorkers had a satchelfull of breaks in the first inning when they scored seven tallies.

Five of the runs were made after a play on which the Pirates claimed interference on the part of Freddie Lindstrom, who was hit in the arm with a thrown ball in close run-up formation. Capt.

WYCKOFF AMAZES IN SPRINT TESTS

SPEAKING OF SPORTS
by HARRY KECK
SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

BILL TILDEN goes down to defeat again in the semi-finals at Wimbledon after having his match with Rene LaCoste apparently under control. His old trick of tossing away a set gets him into a jam from which he cannot later extricate himself. He can't beat age. Time was when five sets in a withering heat didn't bother Big Bill. But those days now are behind him.

HELEN FILKEY, of Chicago, holder of world records, fails to make the United States women's Olympic track and field team under circumstances amounting almost to tragedy in the life of the young girl. She won the 60-yard hurdles in the national championships and Olympic trials at Newark, N. J., the other day, outclassing the field, but fell down literally in the sprints when she suffered a spill, recovered her balance and finished third. Only two qualified for the final, and, as a result, she found herself deprived of one of the 19 berths on the team.

IS GENE TUNNEY paying the penalty for high-hatting his public after winning the heavyweight championship in the lack of interest in his forthcoming match with Tom Heeney? It appears that he is. Within the last week Gene has deemed it necessary to publicly denounce the perpetrators of reports that he is not training soundly for his defense of the title, and also to defend the choice of Heeney as his opponent and to extol the chances of the latter in lofty terms. Gene in his most indifferent mood never managed to approach the heights of indifference of the public with regard to his melee with Heeney, and the belief persists in many quarters that the bout will not come off as scheduled, less than three weeks hence, but will be postponed until the fall to permit of a more thorough ballyhoo.

RAY SCHALK goes the way of many other men who have failed in baseball because they lack the qualities of leadership when thrust into roles calling for such qualifications. In voluntarily stepping down as manager of the White Sox, the onetime snappy little catcher concedes his shortcomings and asks that he be retained as a member of the playing staff of the club, although he has not been active in such a capacity for some

TIES OLYMPIC MARK FOUR TIMES

By LAWSON ROBERTSON,

CAMBRIDGE, July 7.—The 15,000 persons who trooped into the Stadium yesterday afternoon saw in action one of the greatest sprinters in all history in the person of Frank Wyckoff, the 19-year-old athlete of the Los Angeles A. C.

This youngster, a comparative unknown only a few months before, leaped into world fame yesterday when he raced over the 100-meter course four different times, won each event and four consecutive times he tied the existing Olympic mark of 10 3-5 seconds.

Only once in the four heats that he ran was Wyckoff fully extended. In all the others he finished with speed in reserve. In the first heat, which he won by three yards, he actually looked around as he neared

TODAY'S SCHEDULE.

First Division.

Edgewood at College Avenue.
P. A. A. at College Hill.
Stanton Heights at Westinghouse.
University Club not scheduled.

Second Division.

West Park at Mt. Lebanon.
Westinghouse at Minnetonka.
Philadelphia Company at South Hills.

ENCOURAGED by prospect of excellent weather, the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League will resume action this afternoon after a lay-off of almost a month.

Rains and schedule breaks have retarded progress in the local circuit jousting to date, but it is hoped that from now on affairs will run smoothly until the close of hostilities in mid-September.

Today's card calls for three matches in Division One and as many in Division Two. Topping the upper section bill is the Stanton Heights-Westinghouse fray at Westinghouse. The Stantonians at present hold inital position in the first flight standing. The Heightsmen will present full quota of strength with Rinehart, Davis, Beatty and company on deck. The result will settle the league-lead issue for the time being, at least.

P. A. A.-COLLEGE HILL CLASH

Another interesting contest will bring together P. A. A. and College Hill at Beaver Falls. The Winged Head crew, weakened by the absence of Dave O'Loughlin and Jack Lauler, will none the less boast formidable front against the Hill array. The third match in Division One will involve Edgewood and College Avenue on the latter's lot. Unless Capt. Moreland can muster his entire regular line-up, he will find plenty of trouble in meeting Howard Moore's clever contingent.

In Section Two, the pace-setting South Hills aggregation of Karl Wolfe will entertain Philadelphia Company. Westinghouse will have a torrid reception at Minnetonka, and West Park is likely to find the going equally heated at Mt. Lebanon.

In addition to the league skirmishing, the final of the Western Pennsylvania doubles tourney is on the ticket for the P. A. A. gallery court. The titular brush will terminate the much-delayed West Penn championships inaugurated at the Pittsburgh Golf Club under Winged Head auspices almost three weeks ago. In it Dr. John O'Loughlin, winner of the singles crown, will pair with Dr. Billy McEllroy, former owner of the same distinction, to tackle the crack Carnegie Tech duo, B. P. Hoover and A. J. Glaser. Fireworks are promised.

WASHINGTON IN LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 7.—Washington tennis enthusiasts have been invited to join the newly organized Inter-County Tennis League and probably will accept. Other clubs include Carnegie Tech, Coraopolis, Sewickley, Bellevue, Bridgeville and Washington.

Ronald Naser and Ad Lane, former Washington and Jefferson captains; Jim Lyon and Bill Thompson, the latter former West Penn boy champion; Lou Florian and Arthur Boyan, will form the nucleus for the local organization.

leaguers hitting at such ridiculously low marks, as they would be practically worthless in the big show.

THE Giants have signed Garland Buckeye, the 240-pound left-hand pitcher recently released by Cleveland. Buckeye says his trouble was only a temporary soreness in his pitching arm and that he is now ready to pitch again. His contract with Cleveland called for his unconditional release when the Indians did not wish to keep him longer.

When Buckeye pitches for the Giants, with Frank Hogan catching, the fans will see the biggest battery in baseball.

ON top of all the other handicaps under which they are playing in their present plight, the Bucs ran into some umpiring yesterday that was sadly below par. Rigler's work behind the bat was particularly poor.

It's high time for League President Heydler to give some of his umpires a prodding. Several of them are beginning to loaf on the job and to make no effort to get to the right spots from which to judge plays.

ROBERTSON

the finish line, saw no one near him and pulled up. If he hadn't done so, he certainly would have tied if not fractured the world's record of 10 2-5 seconds.

SHOWS REAL ABILITY

Wyckoff showed ability to come from behind and win, as well as the trick of taking the lead and holding it almost without effort. He always ran well within himself, and his consistency was amazing. In the three elimination heats he was timed in 10 3-5, repeated it in the semi-final, and ran the final to win with comparative ease in the exactly same time.

The remarkable thing about this youngster is that he seems to be improving. Barring some accident or setback, this boy may, within the next year or two, hang up marks for the sprints that will endure for generations.

The brilliance of Wyckoff's showing is enhanced by the fact that the rains of Thursday had made it a dead track, at least one-fifth of a second slower than normal.

Running just back of Wyckoff in the matter of spectacular performance was J. Ross Nichols, of Stanford University, who ran the 110-meter high hurdles in 14 4-5 seconds. This was just one-fifth of a second short of the recently established 14 3-5-second mark made by Leighton Dye, of Los Angeles. Dye qualified for the finals, and the race today between the two should be a thriller.

NO JAVELIN UPSETS

The javelin throwers disported true to form and there were no upsets. Arthur W. Sager, of the Boston A. A. topped all opposition with 200 feet 3 inches, which looks rather feeble in comparison with the winning 1924 Olympic mark of 215 feet 9¾ inches and the world's record distance of 218 feet 6⅞ inches. Creth B. Hines, of Georgetown, intercollegiate champion, was second with 195 feet 1 inch.

The big surprises in the tryouts yesterday came in the weight events, when Jack Merchant, ranked as one of the American aces was eliminated in that 16-pound hammer throw and Eric Krentz, the intercollegiate champion, failed to qualify in the discus.

The winner of the hammer throw turned up in Kenneth Caskey, of the Newark A. C., who made 162 feet 9 inches. The American record, as well as the world's record is 189 feet 6½ inches, while the Olympic mark is 179 feet 8 inches, all of which means that if the 16-pound hammer throwers cannot do better for us in Amsterdam against the powerful European opposition he will face, our chances for triumph for that event are faint.

The best discus throw of the afternoon was 151 feet ¾ inches made by Clarence Houser, of Los Angeles.

FAR OFF RECORDS

The efforts put forth by the contestants in the hop, step and jump events were far off the records, but considering the condition of the turf, the distances were good. Sidney Bowman, of the Hammond (La.) High School, was a surprise inasmuch as this practically unknown youngster out jumped the field, making 48 feet 4⅛ inches. Casey, regarded as America's real hope in this event, was second to Bowman with 48 feet 1⅛ inches.

In the shot-putt only one man bettered 50 feet. That was S. H. H. Brix, of the University of Washington, who furnished a real upset when he tossed 50 feet 3¼ inches and beat the best efforts of Eric Krenz. John Kuck, Harlow Rothert and Herbert Schwarze were the other qualifiers.

If the track dries out by this afternoon, which seems quite likely, some new records for the middle distances are certain.

Traynor and other Buccos maintained that Lindstrom pushed his arm out in a deft way. Well, if Freddie was cute enough to do this, he surely got away with it and the five subsequent tallies ruined the Buccos for the afternoon, although the Freebooters certainly did fight right up to the last bell.

Fred Fussell, new southpaw, pitcher who blanked the Cardinals last Sunday, was not close to his good form as he challenged the Manhattan foe. Fred helped to get himself in a mess in the first inning then he failed to hold Lindstrom's grounder, which should have resulted in a double play or a putout at the plate. Neither of the alternatives was accomplished and when the disputed play was decided in favor of the Giants, the jig was up.

MILJUS BALKS

John Miljus was hustled to the mound while the excitement was at its height, but John did not remain long. The big righthander was knicked for a hit and a moment later he uncorked a balk that provoked Manager Bush to such an extent that John was derricked in favor of Joe Dawson.

Dawson stayed on the mound throughout the contest and Louisville Joe gave a good account of himself. The Pirate offensive, meantime, kept pecking away at Joe Genewich with such success that McGraw, fearing what would have been an awful setback, yanked the righthander while he still had a big lead. Joe gave way in the fourth for Jim Faulkner, tall lefthander. The southpaw held the Pirates at bay for awhile, but in the ninth they had Jim on the ropes. Four runs went over the plate in the inning and Eddie Mulligan's pinch attempt caught by Melvin Ott was not far from the home-run zone of rightfield. A homer here would have meant three more tallies.

The Buccos went into action without the services of Wright and Barnhart, who are laid up temporarily. Pete Scott continued his good work, but Dick Bartell at short had a bad day in the field with three foozles, though he helped to atone with three hits.

TERRIS KAYOED BY MILLER

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Ray Miller, Chicago left hook artist, knocked out Sid Terris, popular New York lightweight, in the first round of a 10 round bout at Coney Island stadium last night.

At the start, Terris danced around sending in a few light left jabs to Miller's face against the ropes and caught the one-time "Ghetto Ghost" fluch on the jaw with a left hook. Out on his feet Terris instantly grabbed for his opponent. Miller slipped away and Terris fell flat, his head striking the canvas, and he was counted out.

It was Terris' second successive one-round knockout and apparently the end of his boxing career.

In the semi-final, Sergeant Sammy Baker, welterweight contender, knocked out Nick Palmer, of Brooklyn, in the seventh round of a 10-round bout. Palmer was dropped twice before the knockout.

THREE WOMEN TO CROSS OCEAN IN YACHT RACE

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Three women will be aboard the schooner yacht Elena in the race across the Atlantic Ocean for the Kink Alfonso XIII trophy, emblematic of ocean-racing supremacy.

William B. Bell, of New York, will be aboard the racer. Mrs. Bell, wife of the owner; Miss Helen Driscom Bell, his daughter, and Miss Marion Walters, all of New York, also will be aboard.

time. Popular as a player, Schalk suffered the loss of friendships and good will when the men under him failed to deliver. He simply wasn't cut out to be a manager. For one thing, he was too much of a good fellow and too lenient with his players. The fault of his failure really rests with his employers more than with himself. They cast him in the wrong role. They thought because he could lead he also could drive players on to victory.

LENA BLACKBURNE, who succeeds Schalk, was a great fielding shortstop in his prime, but always a notoriously weak hitter. He is an intelligent baseball man and may make good where Schalk failed, although it is unlikely that he will get far with the Sox as they are at present constituted and in the bad graces of the fans of Chicago in which they find themselves.

ALMOST everybody agrees that the plan recently arrived at whereby Pitt will share its stadium with Carnegie Tech for home football games beginning with the 1929 season is a great thing—for Tech. Pitt still assumes the financial burdens of the debt-weighted athletic plant, and Tech for a percentage of the gate receipts gets the use of one of the finest gridirons in the country. However, the arrangement appears to be about the only solution of Pitt's financial problem, and the Panthers are as glad to enter into it as Tech, and it is a fine deal all the way round for the sports fans of Pittsburgh. When Duquesne University gets on an even footing with both Pitt and Tech, the local collegiate athletic situation will be ideal.

THREE PITT VARSITY SPORT MANAGERS NAMED

Three varsity managers for Pitt's 1928 basketball track and tennis teams have been appointed by W. D. Harrison, Panther director of athletics, and a committee composed of Frank W. Williams, assistant director of athletics, and the coach and captain of the respective teams.

Frank Tyrrell of Langeloth, Pa., who was acting manager of the Pitt track and field team last season, was appointed varsity manager for next season.

Robert Simpson of Huntingdon, Pa., was appointed varsity basketball manager. Simpson was an assistant to Manager . Don Lynch of Evans City last season.

Robert Brinker of Wilkinsburg will manage the Panther tennis team.

All three appointees have made excellent records in scholarship and campus activities.

LOUGHRAN WINDS UP LIGHT TRAINING SESSION

WILDWOOD, N. J., July 7.—(AP.)—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, wound up his light training yesterday for his championship match with Pete Latzo, at Wilkes-Barre later this month, and left today for Harvey's Lake, Pa., to start more strenuous workouts. The light heavyweight king confined his work here to preparatory conditioning, playing much golf and handball.

M'LARNIN CAN ANSWER LATER, COURT DECREES

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Jimmy McLarnin will not be obliged to answer questions as to his "ferocious disposition" until the suit of a former sparring partner, Hjalmer Mogren, for $50,000, actually goes to trial. The State Supreme Court granted his motion to vacate notice for examination before trial yesterday.

Attorneys for McLarnin claimed that Mogren, who seeks damages for a broken jaw suffered in training, has harassed the California lightweight by serving legal papers on him just prior to several important bouts. Counsel said first papers were delivered to McLarnin the night he knocked out Sid Terris here, and notice of examination was served just before Jimmy entered the ring to box Sammy Mandell for the class championship.

BOB M'DONALD LEADS NEW YORK OPEN FIELD

SYRACUSE, July 7.—(AP.)—Bob MacDonald, veteran professional golfer, carrying the colors of the Transit Valley Club of Buffalo, led a field of 107 golfers in the first 36 holes of the New York state open championship here yesterday with a card of 139. MacDonald circled the 18-hole layout of the Onondaga Club with a 70 in the morning, two strokes under par, and scored a 69 in the afternoon.

CALIFORNIA U., YALE WIN

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—(AP.)—Two fighting college crews from opposite sides of the continent—Yale and the University of California—swept down the placid surface of the Schuykill river to brilliant victories which blazed the Olympic trail for Amsterdam for one of them.

Winning over worthy rivals, these two machines qualified to meet today in the grand final for the right to sail for the Olympic games next week as the United States entry in thee eight-oared rowing race.

To win their semi-final heats California had to beat off a courageous challenge from its old rival, Columbia, and Yale was called upon to come from behind to vanquissh Princeton.

Yale covered the 2,000 meters—13 yards less than a mile and a quarter—in the amazing time of five minutes, 18 4-5 seconds, while the timers caught Princeton at 5:192-5.

Two and a fifth seconds separated the California and Colubbia crews at the line. They finished in 5:203-5 and 5:22 4-5 respectfully.

NOTES of the BOXERS

JOE DUNDEE, welterweight champion, boxes Hilario Martinez, the Spanish champion, at Barcelona, Spain, tonight.

Jack McFarland, Wilkinsburg featherweight, boxes Jimmy Gizzy, of Washington, Pa., in the eight-round semi-final to the Young Rudy-Terry Lingo fight at Washington, Pa., Monday night.

The scheduled outdoor boxing show at Cycle Park, McKeesport, Monday night of next week, with Cuddy DeMarco and Larry Brignola meeting in the main bout, now is definitely off. DeMarco was injured in a bout with Joey LeGrey at Ebensburg last Monday night and Promoter McGirr canceled the bill rather than dig up an inferior substitute.

GIANTS SIGN BUCKEYE

Garland Buckeye, 235-pound southpaw pitcher recently released by the Cleveland Indians, will join the Giants here today. Buckeye came to terms with Manager John McGraw late yesterday.

ALFRED WILLS MORAN

After a year in which his memory was a blank, Alfred Wills Moran, shell-shocked war veteran, knows now his identity and will return to his wife and two children in Bogota, N. J. He is the son of Howard Moran, Washington (D. C.) banker.

WIFE WOULD BE OWN BOSS

Although she and her husband live in the same house, Mrs. Katie Ivan, 548 Stokes street, North Braddock, seeks to be declared a femme sole trader, and her husband, Joseph Ivan, is contesting the action. Mrs. Ivan charged her husband had not been supporting her. Having property in her own right, she stated, she wishes to exercise freedom of action without consent of her husband.

Ivan denies non-support. He said his wife had been receiving most of his $1,500-a-year salary. Judge Elder W. Marshall will render a decision later.

PETTERS SOUGHT IN SLAYING

Byrd Is Placed on "Crash Board" to Probe Fatal Plane Accidents

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd was trained for a seafaring profession before taking to aviation. He has explained how a gymnasium accident ruined his plans and later how he begged before he was given a chance as a flier. He described the dangers of experimental flying and the crash of the America, in which he was injured. He explains the sensations of his first flights.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Tail Spins Finally Conquered

CHAPTER VI.

IT FELL to my lot while at Pensacola to try to find out why so many of our pilots were being killed. The conclusion must not be drawn from these accidents I describe that aviation cannot be made safe. It is because of them that we have learned enough to make aviation safe.

As I was one of the few regular officers on the Pensacola Air Station in 1917 I was detailed to the "Crash Board." This was really a sort of "Coroner's Jury." Officially, we had to "sit" on the ghastly evidence that came out of each tragedy. Also I had to go out with the rescue boat and help haul the mangled bodies of my friends out of the water.

It wasn't exactly what you might call stimulating work; certainly not for the beginner.

I remember my first case, while I was still a student. A plane nose-dived into the bay a few hundred yards from the landing.

Though rescue boat and divers reached the wreckage in a few moments, both victims were dead before we arrived. We examined the wreckage carefully as soon as it could be hoisted to the wrecking barge. We found control wires were in good shape, and enough of the body and wings intact to indicate that the equipment was still all right when the plane took her fatal dive.

Evidence Studied

Next day the senior member of the Crash Board looked around the table after all evidence was in and we had cudgeled our brains to figure out what had happened.

"The only things that really help," he said, "are that a student was aboard and that the plane was up only 600 feet when she went into a spin."

The rest of us sat there like dummies. As we were all fliers, we would have given our bottom dollar to know what had killed our friends.

The same fate might be ours before the day was out. Moreover, solution of the mystery could possibly save a score of lives that week, taking the whole country into consideration.

"Probably the student was at the controls," went on the senior member, but without conviction, "and made a bad turn. The plane side-slipped and then went into a spin. Before the instructor could get her out she was down."

Pretty vague; altogether unsatisfying. But the best we could do in those days.

It had been some years before pilots had learned how to get out of tail spins; that is, spinning towards the earth with tail up. It nearly always ended in tragedy.

One day a naval pilot at Pensacola got into a spin and accidentally kicked the high side of the rudder and got out of the spin. That is how the tail spin was conquered.

When we had signed the formal report of that first crash, I took a walk out into the country. I wanted to be alone. Planes were still humming overhead and I was due to go up at 3 o'clock. But first I wanted to come to some sort of understanding with myself. What was the sense of all this killing of good men? After two hours of hard walking and harder thought I decided that it was all just a case of pioneering; more violent than what had gone on with railways, automobiles and radio; but the same in principle.

Flying would be worth all the other three put together, once we got it going. Besides, it would help to win the war. These views I concluded justified the sacrifice.

Student Killed

Three days later I was standing on the beach waiting for my engine to be warmed up. Suddenly the siren sounded. Another crash.

I ran to the rescue boat, boarding her just as she shoved off. Along the ramp and landing were gathering silent men. Out of the quarters into the unfailing sunshine hurried wives and mothers, children, even servants. "Who now," was the question every man and woman wanted to ask, but were afraid to.

When we rounded up to the plane's wreck only one wing was visible above the water. We dove in; our diver followed. As I came to the sufrace I saw the surgeon preparing his kit, frantic to help, but useless until the diver brought up something.

He finally came up—empty-handed. A gunner's mate said: "Only one man down there. He's gone. Not a chance to get him out here. Got to lift the whole mess."

We looked for the other body. It was never found. When the wrecked plane came up at the end of the crane tackle we saw snarled up in it the student. Both hands had a death-grip on the driving wheel.

Crude Devices Used

When these disasters happened little was said about them in quarters. No one felt inclined to discuss details of a tragedy that could strike anywhere among us.

Sometimes it seemed to me our mess was a little gayer after a crash; probably a subconscious effort to throw off the depression such things brought.

It is hard to realize now how absurd were some of the accidents that happened in those days, nor how easily a pilot could get into trouble with some of the crude devices then still in use.

One day two good fliers were stunting at an altitude of about 2,000 feet. I made it a practice to watch as much trick flying as I could in order to pick up the style of the various pilots. This day I was leaning against a hangar, enjoying the antics of my two friends far up in the blue sky above me.

It was considered a feat at the time to get into a tail-spin and then get out; good insurance, too, for one could never tell when this form of descent might be forced upon him unexpectedly.

The plane I was watching presently went into a tail-spin. I had half expected it to. She was high enough to be safe; also it was evident that she had been put into the spin deliberately by the pilot in control.

Down the plane came, down, down—revolving in graceful spirals as she fell. When she reached about 1,000 feet she was still spinning abruptly. A man behind me exclaimed: "Good God, another!"

Some one cried a warning to the observation tower. When the plane was at 200 feet and still falling we knew that she was a goner. One ray of hope came to me as I ran to the rescue boat. The plane was not in a tight spin; that is, her spiral was a fairly large one. Even at this the crash when she hit was pretty awful.

As the speed boat raced toward the wreck I puzzled over what might have happened. I knew that as a rule planes didn't fall so leisurely in a tail spin. Also there was no reason to believe that a good pilot, such as was aboard, would deliberately let his plane get so far down before trying to take her out of the spin.

At that moment I had the pleasure of seeing the two dripping occupants of the plane clamber upon their one undamaged wing. Both were bleeding as we came alongside; one had a broken nose, the other a broken thumb; both were badly bruised and shaken up.

"Got my foot caught," grinned one.

"How's that for luck?" asked the other, but did not smile.

It seemed the bigger of the two, a man who weighed nearly 200 pounds, had got his foot caught under the rudder bar, while the other man was putting the machine through her paces. The rudder had whipped over head from a left tail-spin and had caught and held the poor devil's foot all the way down. This had prevented righting the plane.

Released by Blow

When the latter struck, the blow released his foot. A narrow squeak, if there ever was one. The Crash Board decided that the only reason the two men lived was because their plane's spiral had been a loose one, and the plane itself had struck on a flat part of her spin.

How little the public at large still knew about aviation in those days was shown when one of our pilots was once flying in a high headwind, several thousand feet up. At times strong gusts almost exactly balanced the forward movement of his machine. As a result, every now and then he seemed to stand still.

An elderly lady happened to glance out of a window and saw the stationary plane. After a few moments of astonishment she hurried to the telephone and made the following report to the fire department:

"I don't know what you can do about it, but there's a plane stuck in the air over my house and can't get down!"

As time passed, some of the air tragedies came pretty close to my heart. Personal friends were killed and families I had known for years were bereaved without warning.

Of course it was all part of war and a part of the progress of the new art which they were helping develop. Only now, that those hard days have gone and flying is an established science, do I realize under what strain pilots used to work.

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else, yell, "Hi Teddy!" Well, The Sun-Telegraph's series "Traffic Cops" will tell you how. This fellow today may be found in the South Side, but don't spend the day hunting for him when The Sun-Telegraph will tell you his name Monday.

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS JOHN A. MALONEY, MARRIED, WHO TELLS PEOPLE WHAT TO DO WHEN THEY GET TO PENN AND FRANKSTOWN AVENUES, EAST LIBERTY. HE HAS BEEN A CORNERMAN FOR 8 OF HIS 22 YEARS ON THE FORCE.

35 Years Head

DR. W. M. IRVINE

Dr. William Mann Irvine at his death had completed 35 years as headmaster of Mercersburg Academy. Many prominent Pittsburgh men are alumni of the preparatory school. Dr. Irvine prepared many boys for college and their life works and there are about 7,000 alumni. He took over the school when it was in debt and now its physical value has reached approximately $3,000,000. He completed the building of a $350,000 domitory building and previous to that the $800,000 chapel. President Coolidge's two sons received their preparatory school educations at Mercersburg.

3 COUPLES HUNTED

Three young couples are being sought, it was revealed today, in the murder of Lawrence Frankowski, 60, of 3759 Milwaukee street, gardener and foe of "petting parties" in Herron Hill park.

Deputy Coroner John Danner reported today that three couples had been seen leaving the park late on the night of July 4 shortly after the time Frankowski is believed to have been attacked and fatally wounded. He was found the next day lying in the park with his skull crushed by his son, Alec, and died later in a hospital.

Danner's investigation disclosed that a party had been held at Frankowski's home July 4. His wife and son left with guests when the gathering broke up. When they returned Frankowski was absent. He is thought to have gone to the park and routed a group of "petters" and it is believed they attacked him.

RESERVE PILOTS LEAVE FOR ARMY AIR TRAINING

Thirty reserve officers from Rodgers Field left yesterday for Langley Field, Norfolk, Va., where they will receive two weeks' army aviation training at the Government field. All the officers hold army air corps ratings. The group was headed by Capt. Thomas S. Voss, Rodgers Field commandant. They will receive instructions in latest types of planes and will be trained in bombing and airplane gunnery.

HOME BURNS ON NORTH SIDE

Flames caused damage, which District Fire Chief Louis Steckle estimated at $5,000, to the three-story brick home of Tom F. O'Rourke at 1028 Lamont street, North Side, today. None of the family was at home when the fire broke out in the kitchen, and the flames were first seen by a neighbor, Mrs. D. A. Leopold, who turned in an alarm.

ANCIENT BONDS SUIT BASIS

Hidden in a secret drawer for 75 years, 83 bond coupons valued at $2,390, have been discovered by William T. Kirk, Jr. They were made the basis of a suit for that amount against Allegheny County in Common Pleas court yesterday.

The coupons had matured more than 40 years ago and payment had been refused by County Controller Robert G. Woodside. Former Controller C. C. McGovern had also refused to honor them.

Eihgty-three of the coupons came into the possession of George W. Kirk, from whom they were inherited in 1872 by William T. Kirk, who died in 1894. They were then inherited by Debora Kirk, his wife.

In 1896 Debora Kirk moved into a smaller house and having more furniture than she had room for, distributed part of her things among her children. A chest of drawers was given to William T. Kirk, her son. He discovered the coupons, together with an issue of Confederate money, in a secret drawer in the chest. His broker presented them to Controller McGovern, who refused payment, but later, in a letter, it is alleged, said they would be redeemed if presented again. When presented payment again was refused and Controller Woodside also repudiated them, it is declared, hence the suit.

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 7.

I tell you these are sure hard times for fellows fighting to stay on the front page.

Coolidge had to catch two fish on one line on his birthday to make the grade. A Belgian millionaire had to jump out of his plane and light running in the English Channel. If it had been two summers ago he would have drowned a channel swimmer.

Mayor Walker is out here in Hollywood trying to get in the movies.

Hoover says the farmers have got him wrong. That he has always been especially fond of them. And I myself hope that Hearst will be reasonable. I know if I had won, I certainly would have been lenient with him. The only thing is, Brisbane is liable to want his commission out of it.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

Bob Is Greatly Surprised By the Arrival of Captain Scarface

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Bob finds Java Dick in Singapore, who promises his help in solving the mystery. The Idol contains the key to a great fortune. Bob hears the story of Hsi Yan's fight with his and receives the other Idol which containus the key to the cypher. Bob translates the cypher and then destroys it.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"NO, TUAN," Nanu answered. "The Tuan has breathed it too long. It is chloroform."

Bob Kingsley lurched to his feet. Mindar Singh! Chloroform! His mind was beginning to function in some degree now. He staggered to the washstand drawer and wrenched it open. A sheet of paper fell out into his hand. He read the few scrawled lines upon it laboriously:

"How runs the saying, Sahib? If the mountain will not come to Mohammed, then must Mohammed go to the mountain."

He searched inside the drawer. The two ivory idols were gone.

It was hot, muggy and sticky, and the sun blazed furiously even through the awning that had been rigged on the Alita's after deck, where, to his intense disgust, Bob Kingsley had been obliged to spend the day inactively—and, to his further disgust, though it was now already late afternoon, he still felt the effects of the chloroform with which Mindar Singh had drugged him in the early morning hours.

And now he leaned against the schooner's rail, and, not for the first time, cursed Mindar Singh with his whole heart. True, in respect of some of the circumstances surrounding Mindar Singh's treachery, there was a certain confusion in his, Bob Kingsley's mind, but in the main it all seemed clear enough. Mindar Singh had double-crossed him. That was absurdly apparent! Mindar Singh, the faithful servant, was a traitorous cur, and appeared to be hand-in-glove with Chen-shu and Hsi Yan's erstwhile crew—or, at least, had been, for it looked now, since Java Dick had said that Chen-shu was searching everywhere to get his hands on the man, that Mindar Singh had double-crossed his confederates as well, and in the end had stolen the idol from him himself.

Also, Mindar Singh's coming to the Alita, coupled with the bounder's cool reference to Mohammed, was equally clear—the way to get the second idol was to bring the first, and so inspire a trust that would be wholly disarming. But there was one point that Bob Kingsley had not been able to explain entirely to his satisfaction. It had been simple enough for Mindar Singh, once installed on the Alita and trusted by everybody on board, to steal down into the cabin again unnoticed in the darkness; and it was simple enough, too, to account for the fact that Mindar Singh had every reason to believe that the idols were in the washstand drawer in the stateroom, for the curtain had not been drawn across the doorway, and he, Bob Kingsley, had made no effort to conceal his movements from the other when he had opened the drawer and taken out the single idol that had been there in the first place; likewise, it was readily apparent that Mindar Singh had proposed to run no risk of being caught or of being disturbed should he be obliged to carry his search further afield. Hence the chloroform; but if Mindar Singh had come with the intention of stealing the idols, as his possession of the chloroform would indicate, why had he explained the key to the cipher? Bob Kingsley shrugged his shoulders. Only Mindar Singh could answer that, of course! But the simplest and most natural explanation seemed to be that, though prepared for any emergency, Mindar Singh had been none too sure that he would actually be able to get his hands on the second idol, and so had taken no chances and had gone the limit to establish himself on a basis of faith that could not possibly be questioned, the which, plainly, must be his first consideration; and then, afterwards—

Again Bob Kingsley shrugged his shoulders. What was the use of theorizing on what Mindar Singh had, or had not, proposed to do under this or that circumstance? And, after all, what difference did it make? Mindar Singh was an opportunist of the first water! Let it go at that! Mindar Singh had got the idols; but—Bob Kingsley chuckled grimly—the two idols would do Mindar Singh no good! All Mindar Singh had for his pains was the spurious cipher—and that was all Mindar Singh, or any of the rest of them, ever would have! The genuine cipher was destroyed, and the only record of it that remained was the one that was stored away in the cells of his, Bob Kingsley's memory!

Perhaps, after all, then, he should be grateful to Mindar Singh! Hsi Yan's treasure in return for a little inconvenience resulting from a whiff of chloroform! He shook his head in abrupt disapproval of his own facetiousness. That was all right enough, but it did not solve the problem that had been an obsession with him all day. What was his next move to be? Mindar Singh was a liar of parts, and how much of Mindar Singh's story was true or false it was impossible to tell—but everything pointed to the fact that the treasure of Hsi Yan was real and actual. He was very much tempted to set sail for Luala at once and dig it up. But there was Chen-shu! Every last one of them! That was the promise he had made—and the promise that he meant to keep! Should he stay and reckon first with Chen-shu, and leave the treasure until afterwards? Suppose something happened to him—that Chen-shu won the last hand! He would have liked to feel that the Old Dad had got the money—the plantation on Patua could do with a bit, God knew! On the other hand, Chen-shu and his scaly crowd were here now. Damn! What should he do? If he stayed, Java Dick appeared to be the best bet. He hadn't heard anything more from Java Dick, but Java Dick couldn't work miracles. The man would have to have time in order to accomplish anything. Meanwhile, where did Chen-shu stand in respect of what had happened? Did Chen-shu know that Mindar Singh had been on the Alita? If he did—how much else did he know? If by any chance Chen-shu knew that neither one of the idols was any longer in—

His thoughts were suddenly diverted. He had been watching in a casual way a dinghy some distance off that was rowed by two natives and in the stern of which was a white man. And now his attention became riveted upon the dinghy.

And then, the next minute, Bob Kingsley leaned out over the rail, and shouted at top voice.

"Scarface!" he yelled joyously.

The figure in the dinghy waved his hand.

"Aye, lad, it's me!" came back the answer—and a moment later Captain Scarface came clambering up over the schooner's side.

CHAPTER XLVI.

AND Bob Kingsley laughed his pleasure as he stretched out his hand. It was the same old Scarface that he hadn't seen since he was a kid—the same old cap with its battered black visor; the same grizzled hair and the keen gray eyes; the same honest unhandsome face disfigured by the white, semicircular scar—a scar that, in the light of the story he, Bob Kingsley, had heard not so many days ago in Patua, now possessed an entirely new significance.

Two huge and hairy paws came down with a hearty bang on Bob Kingsley's shoulders.

"Lad, lad, but I'm glad to see you!" grinned Captain Scarface. "How long is it now—eight years or ten—since I've clapped eyes on you? You were only a bit of a nipper then, but now you're as big as I am—and maybe bigger! Eh? What? And how's the Old Man? How's Robert? I heard he wasn't any too well."

"He isn't," said Bob Kingsley, his face suddenly sobered. "I'll tell you about him—and a lot of other things too. But wait a minute till I have Nanu fetch up a chair. It's too hot in the cabin."

"Never mind the chair," said Captain Scarface, planting himself down on the edge of the cabin skylight; "this suits me. I fancy we've both got tales to tell. That was a bad business at Kalawa, lad! Who's going to spin his yarn first?"

Bob Kingsley seated himself beside the other.

"Perhaps it would be better if I did," he answered, "for I've been somewhat in the thick of it of late, and there's a good deal I'd like to have you know."

Captain Scarface took out his pipe and began to fill it.

"All right," he nodded. "Fire ahead, son!"

"There's rather a lot of it, but I'll try to make it as brief as I can," said Bob Kingsley—and, beginning with the night that the Monotah had arrived in Patua, he rehearsed the occurrences of the days that had followed, telling of Chen-shu and the four Chinamen, the murder of Colonel Lyle, of which Verna had accused him, the wreck of the Monotah, his "kidnaping" of Verna and the escape from Aoru, his visit to Java Dick's with the spurious cipher, the treachery of Mindar Singh, and the theft of the two ivory gods. "And," he concluded, "that brings us right down to the present moment, when, as you see, I'm still a bit wobbly from that spot of chloroform the blighter soaked me with."

"A GARDEN DE LUXE"

-:- -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"GARDEN" is a beautiful word in every language. It summons delicious memories, delightful anticipations, strange unrests and wistful wishes. God walked in a garden in the cool of the day. In the cool of the day he still walks for most of the world, those who have one and those who wish for one and haven't the slightest chance of ever being the holder of one.

The man who works down under the Bridge at the worldly wise business of getting out a scandal sheet has a Garden at home out on Long Island. The broker grows peonies and yellow lilies and boasts of his roses. The little child carries black dirt on a shovel as big as a postage stamp, with a bright red handle, for his "Dambo," with her soft gray hair under a sun-bonnet, to put around her strawberry plants and wild red honey-suckle.

A garden is the runaway place. An ambition. I have been in one at 5 o'clock in the morning—to see, if you want to know—if the crows had gotten my baby thrushes, and marveled at its mysterious beauty and been half afraid of meeting something sprite-like, or something more Divine around the horn-beam tree. All of us have known the magic of a garden in moonlight—bathed in silver, wizard light. Then the Huntress moon allies herself with Eros and pursues his victims with him.

"Nature is alone undying," and a garden was the world's first home. Cupid loves a garden, and his is a Garden de Luxe.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Dinner at the Farmhouse Is a Dismal Failure

OUR dinners at the farmhouse, especially when Dicky is at home and Lillian is with us, are generally most pleasurable affairs, for both my husband and our old friend possess the ability and the inclination to talk entertainingly. Either of them is sufficient to insure the conversational success of a meal. When both of them are present, dinner is a long-drawn-out affair, because the rest of us listen and laugh, and we all take an unconscionable time for the meal.

But upon this evening, following Dicky's return from the city, we might have just returned from a funeral. Everybody was silent, distrait. Conversation was limited to perfunctory necessity and I think we were all glad when the meal was over.

It was not hard for me to guess the reason for the general air of gloom. Almost all of us were absorbed in some special unpleasant problem of our own. Dicky, I know, was only waiting the opportunity to berate me for my agreeing to tutor Eleanor Lincoln at Philip Veritzen's behest; his mother was still irritated because of his inconsiderate slamming of his door, and because of Katie's noisy ways, while Katherine I was sure was revolving the tragic emotional problem presented by Hal Meredith's letter.

What was troubling Lillian I could not imagine, but the almost psychic tie between us is so strong that I knew she was sorely beset by some problem. Yet I knew of nothing which could have disturbed her—except—my memory flashed back to the incident of the afternoon when she had recognized the red-bearded man as a hanger-on of the revolutionary societies which it had been her business as a secret service operative to investigate and destroy. Was this man a more dangerous character than she had represented to me, and had she minimized his potentiality for evil because of the fact that Dicky knew the man and had been heard to jest with him? With mounting excitement I recalled Lillian's avowed intention of questioning Dicky concerning the man at her first opportunity and wondered whether or not she would pass on to me the information she received from Dicky—if indeed he told her anything of value.

But the major portion of my thoughts was not given to conjectures concerning others. I had enough gloomy thoughts of my own to supply a dozen people. The sight of Edith Fairfax's photograph with the intimate familiar message written across it, which I had caught when it had fallen unobserved from Dicky's pocket had shaken me to a degree as surprising as it was torturing.

In the awful time following Grace Draper's suicide and Dicky's horrible doubt of me, which had wounded me beyond my power to pardon him, I had given no thought to Edith Fairfax, whose hopeless love for Dicky never had been denied by her. That she was in North Carolina with her old and delightful great-aunt, Miss Dora Paige, I knew, and had guessed that Dicky had arranged her vacation from the magazine in whose management they were partners, because he wished no complication in the problem of our future which confronted us.

But this message brought to my mind a sudden conviction that Edith Fairfax was playing a waiting game, and that if Dicky and I came to the final parting of the ways, as had seemed most likely when she left for the South she would be at hand with her beauty, her attractive personality, her business comradeship and her great love to fill the place which I left vacant.

With all the will power I possessed I braced myself to go through my coming interview with Dicky upon the subject of teaching Eleanor Lincoln without betraying my knowledge of the photograph or my reaction to it. But I was digging my nails deep into my plans when after dinner Dicky seized a moment when we were standing apart from the rest and said curtly:

"Come up to my room as soon as you can slip away. I want to talk to you."

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 8

SUNDAY'S Horoscope hold gratifying forecast of advancement, prosperity and happiness in many phases of life, with personal satisfaction and denouements reaching a high climax. It might be well not to be carried away by excitement nor depressed by elderly persons or small delays or obstructions.

Those whose birthday it is stand at the door of a year of splendid achievements and satisfactions. There may be promotions, honors or preferments as well as gratifications and keen happiness in personal affiliations. But let not small obstacles or elderly persons interfere with this felicity.

A child born on this day may be endowed with many excellent qualities and graces for success and happiness in life, and it will find joy in the effort necessary to attain this high estate.

Monday, July 9

WITH the major benefic, Jupiter, in powerful sway, both in aspect with Sol, Luna and Venus, many benefits and advantages may be presaged. There should be fulfilled ambitions; expansions and general fruition in lines of human activity, but be careful of duplicity in new ventures.

In heart and home affairs the parallel between the two great benefics brings joy and promise.

Those whose birthday it is are under promise of a year of increased fortunes, with expansion and growth in many directions. But be careful as to new ventures, menaced by deception or fraud. Personal affiliations, especially of romantic nature, are under benignant influences.

A child born on this day will have many talents and graces making for its rise in life to a place of importance and happiness, although it may be subject to secret enmities.

For the Lovelorn

Unhappy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a rich girl, and have everything I want except my love. I am desperately in love with a boy who is just a hard-working boy but very nice. He has to save every penny he earns to keep his mother and sister. Well, my family say this boy is not good enough for me. I think he is too good. Don't you, Miss Gale? He has proposed to me several times, but I never accepted. This boy does not drink, smoke or pet. Once in a while he tries to kiss me and succeeds. Well, as people say all the rich people smoke, so it is true with me. But I am trying to break myself of this because he doesn't like it. I hope you are able to read this and hope it is not too long. Please may I see the answer to this printed as soon as possible, because he has proposed to me and I told him to wait till I received your answer whether he is good enough or not.

UNHAPPY.

He certainly seems good enough for you, Unhappy, but is he able to support you? If he has to keep his family, how can he take care of you? From your letter I judge you to be very young, so I advise you not to accept his proposal just now.

Rosetta and Percy

DEAR MISS GALE:

During our short acquaintance we have been reading your wonderful advice to the lovelorn and we have at last decided to come to you with our great problem. Now, Miss Gale, here is our problem: We have known each other for just one week. We met at a school dance. Now, Rosetta is just 15 years old and Percy is 16. We wonder if there is such a thing as love at first sight. Now, Miss Gale, do you think we are too young to be really and truly in love. Since we are thinking of trying out one of these companionate marriages, we want your advice. Don't tell us to forget each other, for we love each other dearly and we both agreed that it would be impossible. Wishing you the best of luck, we are,

ROSETTA AND PERCY.

My dears, even grown folks cannot be sure of their affections after just a week's acquaintance, so how could children like you know yourselves? Of course you are too young to be in love. Don't forget each other. Be friends, but don't imagine yourselves in love. As for companionate marriage—forget that such a phrase exists.

Speculation More Rational. Oil Outlook Good. Pittsburgh Takes Lead.

By B. C. FORBES

THE stock market's action between now and November is any man's guess. It was easy to foresee the recent violent tumble, the wild orgy, could have only that kind of an end.

Now that speculation has become more rational the outlook is less certain. The rich leaders are still working for higher prices. Many shrewd business men and others who took big profits before the break came, are now inclined to rebuy. Some have actually bought. Others are still waiting and watching.

The writer is willing to wait. The supply of securities will not give out. Already underwriters are offering somewhat better inducements in order to distribute new issues.

Money is not as plentiful as it was. Gold exports have been a very important factor.

And politics have a habit of proving disconcerting at awkward moments.

TALKING of politics, a business man commenting on what was quoted in this column, writes:

"Your column is doing great work by keeping the people in touch with business affairs of importance. But there is one statement that I know is erroneous and I wish to correct it.

"You stated or assumed that the Catholics are for Al Smith for President. This is not true. I am a Catholic and I am for Hoover. Many people assume that because a man is a Catholic he is for other Catholics in business and political life. It is not true. Few Catholics stick together outside of the church.

"I believe Hoover is the best qualified for the position, and hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of Catholics will, like myself, vote for him on that basis."

Wall Street at present quotes Hoover's stock, so to speak, higher than Smith's. But a lively Smith campaign is expected.

HERBERT FLEISHBACKER, leading California banker, who has been visiting New York, tells me that the oil industry's outlook in that state has been improved encouragingly. Such oil giants as Kenneth M. Kingsbury, of Standard Oil of California; George Leigh, Jones or Shell Union and William F. Humphrey, of Associated Oil, acting in cooperation with Gov. Young have been able to check some of the more flagrant wastes and losses and to turn the local industry into more rational channels.

Mr. Fleischbacker feels confident that the worst is over and that the best California oil companies will do distinctly better before long.

Most oil men are tired of ruinous warfare. Peace is in the air. Walter C. Teagle, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, is hopeful for the longer outlook, but he tells me that the recovery is likely to be slow rather than swift.

For a long hold, dependable oil stocks look attractive. They have not been boomed, but neglected. Buy when others aren't.

PITTSBURGH'S Chamber of Commerce is glad Baltimore's exhibit of local-made things was so successful—as told in this column. Pittsburgh set the first example, J. M. Williams, of the chamber, points out. In 1926 there was a "Let's Know Pittsburgh" fortnight, which scored a bull's-eye. Last year it was repeated on a larger scale.

"Since our exhibition," says Mr. Williams, "Cincinnati, Detroit and Cleveland have followed our lead and now comes Baltimore. Still other cities no doubt could profit by a similar procedure."

As John Bull says when he listens approvingly to a speech, "Hear, hear!"

FARM electrification, which will go far toward making rural life more congenial, is making progress. Not only are power companies very active, but what is not so widely known, individual lighting points are being installed on an amazingly large scale.

C. C. Whistler, of the Delco Light Company of Dayton, writes apropos of what was said here recently. "For a good many years it is to the individual plant that several millions or more of farmers must look for electric service. The rural homes served by high-line current are only about equal to the number of farms served by Delco Light individual plants. More than 300,000 of these plants are now in use.

Electrification is civilization. Education is needed to convince our farmers of the worthwhileness, the many sided usefulness of electricity.

MARKET MOVES IRREGULARLY HIGHER

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Prices moved irregularly higher at the opening of today's stock market. Initial gains of a point or two were recorded by U. S. Steel common, Wright Aeronautical, Southern Railway and Illinois Central. General Electric sold off a point.

A few weak spots cropped out in the early trading, but the main tendency continued upward. United States Steel common, General Motors and International Combustion quickly assumed the leadership, each moving up about 2 points. Johns Manville was run up 5½ points and Radio, which opened fractionally higher, extended its gain to 2 points.

Further accumulation was noted in the Indian Refining issues, the common advancing 3½ points to a new high record at 36, or just four times the year's low. Sinclair improved fractionally, but heaviness developed in some of the other oils, Sun Oil and General Asphalt each losing about a point.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables quoted around $4.87⅛.

CHARGE RAIDING ON COAL LEASES

Claiming that coal is being mined from their lands, the Pittsburgh Coal Company has asked Judge Elder W. Marshall, of Common Pleas Court, to restrain the United States Coal and Supply Company, operating in the hills of the Nineteenth Ward, from taking the former's coal and to render an accounting.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company also asks for the right to conduct a survey of the lands in question, these involving what are known as the Wenzel, Miller and Bateman tracts. It is claimed that thousands of tons of coal have been removed from the lands of the Pittsburgh Coal Company by the defendants during the last two years.

Judge Marshall has fixed July 10 as the date for the hearing on the plaintiff's application for a temporary injunction.

Oppose "Northern" Rail Merger.

Merger of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railways, permission for which is sought before the Interstate Commerce Commission, would be inconsistent with the portion of the interstate commerce act relating to consolidations, the Wisconsin Railroad Commission contends in a brief submitted to the interstate body. The state railroad commission is opposing the merger as an intervening body, on the ground that it would be detrimental to the public interest in Wisconsin by seriously weakening the Chicago, Milwauke, St. Paul and Pacific Railway system, which it says is one of the most important common carriers of the state.

Rails Earned 4.71 Per Cent in May.

Class 1 railroads in May had net railway operating income amounting to $88,179,013, according to the Bureau of Railway Economics. The figure represents an annual rate of return of 4.71 per cent on property investment. In May, 1927, the income was $86,007,707 or 4.70 per cent return. Gross operating revenues for the month totaled $510,714,148, a decrease of 1.7 per cent from the revenues for the same month last year, while operating expenses were $381,836,287, a decrease of 2.5 per cent. Payment of taxes amounted to $30,757,178, a decrease of 4.5 per cent. This brought the total tax bill of the railroads for the first five months of the year to $150,325,150, a decrease of 1.9 per cent from the same period in 1927. For the first five months of 1928, the bureau reported the Class 1 railroads recorded a net railway operating income of $376,027,819, a return of 4.41 per cent on the property investment, compared with $385,045,081 or 4.62 per cent return.

Weather Helps Trade, Crops.

Bradstreets weekly trade review says: High temperatures the country over ushered in the month of July and gave a needed stimulus on the one hand to retail trade and on the other to crops. Retail buying, with the added impetus of vacation needed buying, set up a really good week's record, while the advent of dry, hot weather made possible the gathering of the southwestern wheat crop and gave a much-needed impetus to corn, which has an abundance of moisture to aid it in making up for lost time. A third important favorable development was the strength in grain prices, credited mainly to reported buying of wheat in European markets, which is attributed to the small supplies of old grain in Russia and the poor reports as to winter wheat in that country. Other developments of the week have to do with the continued good reports from the automobile trade, over against which are the quieting down of steel production, mainly a seasonal development, and the rather more than seasonal curtailment of cotton manufacturing. Weekly bank clearings, $12,033,624,000, an increase of 13.7 per cent over last year.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE stocks of another Pittsburgh organization will be traded on the New York Stock Exchange soon if favorable action is taken on the application of Spang, Chalfant & Co., Inc., for the listing of its common and preferred stocks.

Wall Street's interest in local industry has been greatly increased in the past few years by the listing of the stocks of such companies as McKeesport Tin Plate, Standard Sanitary Manufacturing, A. M. Byers and Oil Well Supply.

SPANG, CHALFANT & Co. has been making welded pipe for over a century. It recently added the production of seamless tubing to its activities by a merger with the Standard Seamless Tube Company.

The demand for seamless pipe has been growing rapidly, and the prediction has even been made that it may eventually supplant welded pipe for many uses. The consolidation has made it possible for Spang to meet this trend. It also gave Standard Seamless the outlet of Spang's well developed sales facilities.

THE company also bought 100,000 shares of a total of 375,625 shares outstanding of the Oil Well Supply Company common stock. This investment will not be immediately productive in dividends, but it has resulted in Oil Well Supply starting the distribution of Spang-Chalfant pipe through its 90 stores in the oil fields.

Pipe made by the National Tube Company formerly was sold by Oil Well Supply. When the latter is enjoying a normal volume of business it distributes in the neighborhood of 150,000 tons of pipe a year. The total capacity of Spang, Chalfant's mills is 600,000 tons a year, so that the importance of this addition to the volume of business can readily be seen.

THE consumption of pipe has not been up to normal for the past year. The reduction of oil well drilling activity has been the principal factor. Spang is being helped through this dull period, however, by the addition of Oil Well Supply as a sales outlet and by recent orders for large tonnages of line pipe.

THE year 1927 was not an especially good one from an earnings standpoint, since the unsatisfactory demand in the oil country was felt in the latter half of the year. But in spite of this adverse condition, earnings were seven times the interest requirements on the $10,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds, and they were three and six-tenths times the dividend requirements on the $11,750,000 of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

NET profit last year was $2,599,963, which was equivalent to $2.52 a share on the 750,000 shares of common stock after deducting dividends on the preferred.

In 1926, a good year for the pipe producers, net income was $4,660,130, which was equivalent to $5.27 a share on the common stock. Earnings for both years are adjusted to give effect to the merger and the new financing carried out this year.

THE balance sheet of December 31, 1927, after giving effect to the merger, showed a strong condition. Physical properties which had been appraised at $24,000,000 were carried at $20,000,000. Current assets were $8,730,000 against current liabilities of only $1,861,672. Cash of $1,322,909 and marketable securities called for redemption on March 15 of $605,000 exceeded current liabilities.

MANUFACTURERS of window glass are hopeful that tariff relief may be given to them in the near future. Over a year ago a petition was made to the Tariff Commission for protection against foreign competition. Since then investigations have been made of costs here and abroad. A hearing on the case has been called for August 7. A similar hearing was recently granted the plate glass producers, but no decision has been reached by the commission.

MOST of the ills of the glass industry during the last three years of small profits can be laid at the door of the foreign competition of Belgian and Czechoslovakian producers. Low labor costs in these factories, which employ great numbers of women, has made it possible for them to deliver glass at coastal points in this country for prices below domestic production costs.

Garbage, bad eggs and sewage are being dumped on the premises of Antonio Skowonski, at 487 Sterling street, South Side, by neighbors, Attorney Henry Ellenbogen informed Judge Elder W. Marshall in Common Pleas Court yesterday, where he appeared to obtain an injunction to put a stop to the neighborhood feud. Marian Lewalski and his wife, who reside at 489 Sterling street, are named as the neighbors causing the trouble.

The case was brought to court last winter, but an injunction was refused when it appeared that the quarrel had been settled. The court told counsel that he should wait until the eSptember term before asking for an injunction.

CHARLEROI, Pa., July 7.—Announcement has been made by the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company officials that their Charleroi mine, which employs from 450 to 500 men, would be reopened after a shutdown of a year and half. It was closed when a sympathy strike was instituted by workmen because a West Newton plant had been made open shop six months previous to the general strike of union miners. WIDE VARIETY IN CHURCH SERVICES

Churchgoers are offered great variety in services arranged for tomorrow. The subjects of the pulpit orators cover a wide range of religious and moral problems. A missionary from India, a college president and a well-known New York clergyman will be among the visiting preachers. At two churches the services will be for fraternal organizations. A solemn novena for Ste. Therese is among the interesting items on the city's program of worship. There will be union services in the evening at Carnegie Music Hall, at the West Park band stand, at the North Boroughs Y. M. C. A. and on Calvary Church lawn, Shady avenue and Walnut street.

FOR ORANGEMEN

In commemoration of the Battle of the Boyne, in which, in July, 1690, the forces of William III gained a brilliant victory over those of James II, a service for Orangemen will be held at the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, Sunday evening. Members of the order, including a number of high officials, will attend in full regalia. The pastor, Dr. George W. Shelton, has chosen for his sermon topic, "What Orangemen Stand for Today."

The Old First Methodist Protestant Church, 611 Union avenue, North Side, which is celebrating its one hundredth anniversary, will be host at the evening service to the Modern Woodmen of America. The Rev. J. Robert Carlton Clark, the pastor, will preach, and there will be special music.

CATHOLIC PILGRIMS

Dr. James R. Cox. Mass will be celebrated the morning of the departure and the pilgrims will partake of the Holy Communion. Father Cox will try to bring back some interesting objects from the catacombs at Rome and will ask the Pope for his blessing for the replica of these underground passages in Pittsburgh.

After 27 years of service among the natives of India, most of the time in remote parts of that mysterious land, the Rev. C. W. Bowers, of the American Baptist Mission, is in Pittsburgh on furlough. He will tell of his strange experiences in an address at the morning service of the Brushton Methodist Episcopal Church, Kelly and Hale streets.

SERVICES ON LAWN

Dr. John Ray Ewers, minister of the East End Christian Church, will be the preacher at the union services on Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church lawn in the evening. Six churches are uniting in worship. Dr. Ewers will discuss "A Modern Test for Religion."

The Rev. Dr. John B. Laird, of Philadelphia, will deliver two sermons in Pittsburgh tomorrow. He will be heard in the First Prebyterian Church, Sixth street, at both the morning and evening service. The Rev. Clarence Edward Macartney is pastor.

The Rev. Dr. Benjamin F. Farber, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of New York City, will fill the pulpit at the morning service of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church. Dr. Farber once lived in Pittsburgh and was pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Dr. W. Charles Wallace, president of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., will preach at the union services in Carnegie Music Hall tomorrow evening.

The Rev. Dr. John M. Gaston, secretary of the Board of National Missions, will preach at the forenoon service in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church.

SERVICES AT SHRINE

The novena in honor of Sainte Therese, "the Little Flower of Jesus," who died only a comparatively few years ago, will begin at the Shrine of the Little Flower in the Carmelite Church, Center avenue and Crawford street, where relics of the saint are preserved, tomorrow, and continue until July 16. There will be daily services at 12:20, 3:15, 6:15, 7:15 and 8:15 o'clock, with sermons by the Rev. Father Peter O'Carm.

"White Robes," will be the subject of a talk to be delivered at 11 a. m. in the Salvation Army auditorium, 425 Second avenue, by Ensign W. B. Crouch. At 8 p. m. his topic will be "Only a Woman." There will be an instrumental musical program at both services and vocal duets by Ensign and Mrs. Crouch.

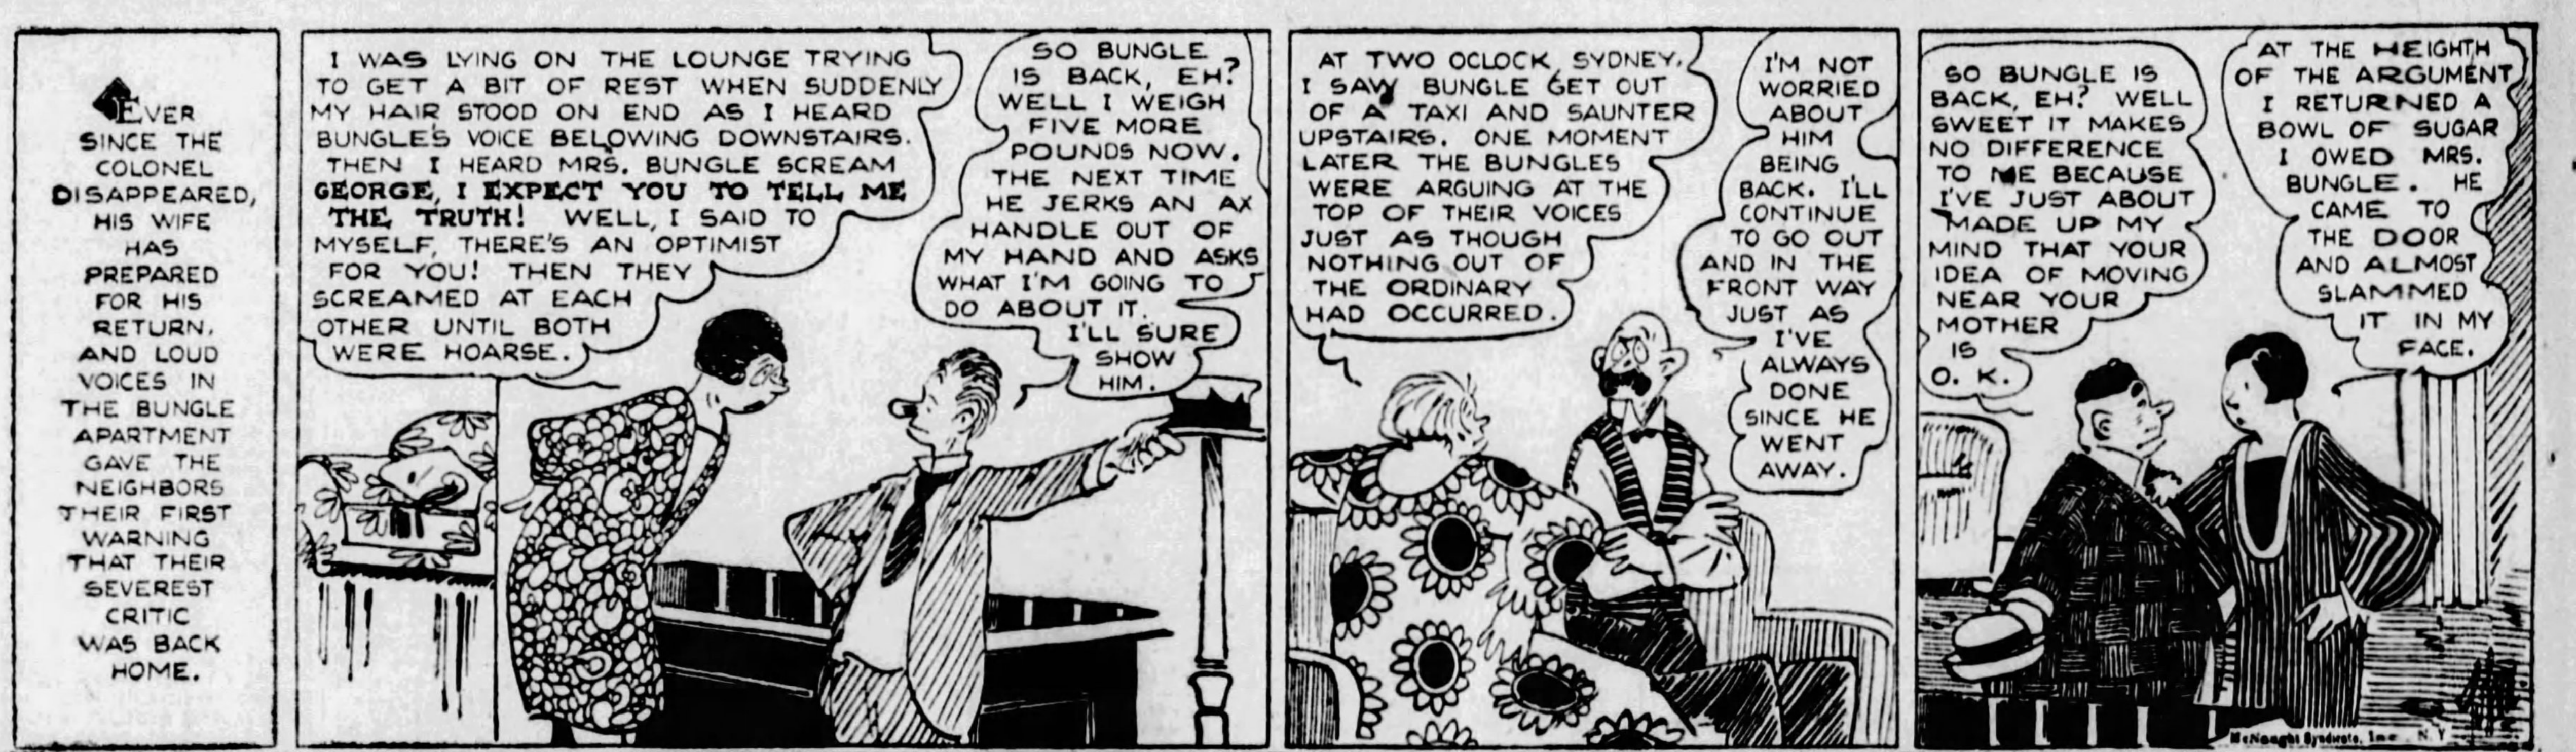
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

Worried Neighbors



EVER SINCE THE COLONEL DISAPPEARED, HIS WIFE HAS PREPARED FOR HIS RETURN, AND LOUD VOICES IN THE BUNGLE APARTMENT GAVE THE NEIGHBORS THEIR FIRST WARNING THAT THEIR SEVEREST CRITIC WAS BACK HOME.
I WAS LYING ON THE LOUNGE TRYING TO GET A BIT OF REST WHEN SUDDENLY MY HAIR STOOD ON END AS I HEARD BUNGLE'S VOICE BELOWING DOWNSTAIRS. THEN I HEARD MRS. BUNGLE SCREAM GEORGE, I EXPECT YOU TO TELL ME THE TRUTH! WELL, I SAID TO MYSELF, THERE'S AN OPTIMIST FOR YOU! THEN THEY SCREAMED AT EACH OTHER UNTIL BOTH WERE HOARSE.
SO BUNGLE IS BACK, EH? WELL I WEIGH FIVE MORE POUNDS NOW. THE NEXT TIME HE JERKS AN AX HANDLE OUT OF MY HAND AND ASKS WHAT I'M GOING TO DO ABOUT IT. I'LL SURE SHOW HIM.
AT TWO OCLOCK, SYDNEY, I SAW BUNGLE GET OUT OF A TAXI AND SAUNTER UPSTAIRS. ONE MOMENT LATER THE BUNGLES WERE ARGUING AT THE TOP OF THEIR VOICES JUST AS THOUGH NOTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY HAD OCCURRED.
I'M NOT WORRIED ABOUT HIM BEING BACK. I'LL CONTINUE TO GO OUT AND IN THE FRONT WAY JUST AS I'VE ALWAYS DONE SINCE HE WENT AWAY.
SO BUNGLE IS BACK, EH? WELL SWEET IT MAKES NO DIFFERENCE TO ME BECAUSE I'VE JUST ABOUT MADE UP MY MIND THAT YOUR IDEA OF MOVING NEAR YOUR MOTHER IS O. K.
AT THE HEIGHTH OF THE ARGUMENT I RETURNED A BOWL OF SUGAR I OWED MRS. BUNGLE. HE CAME TO THE DOOR AND ALMOST SLAMMED IT IN MY FACE.

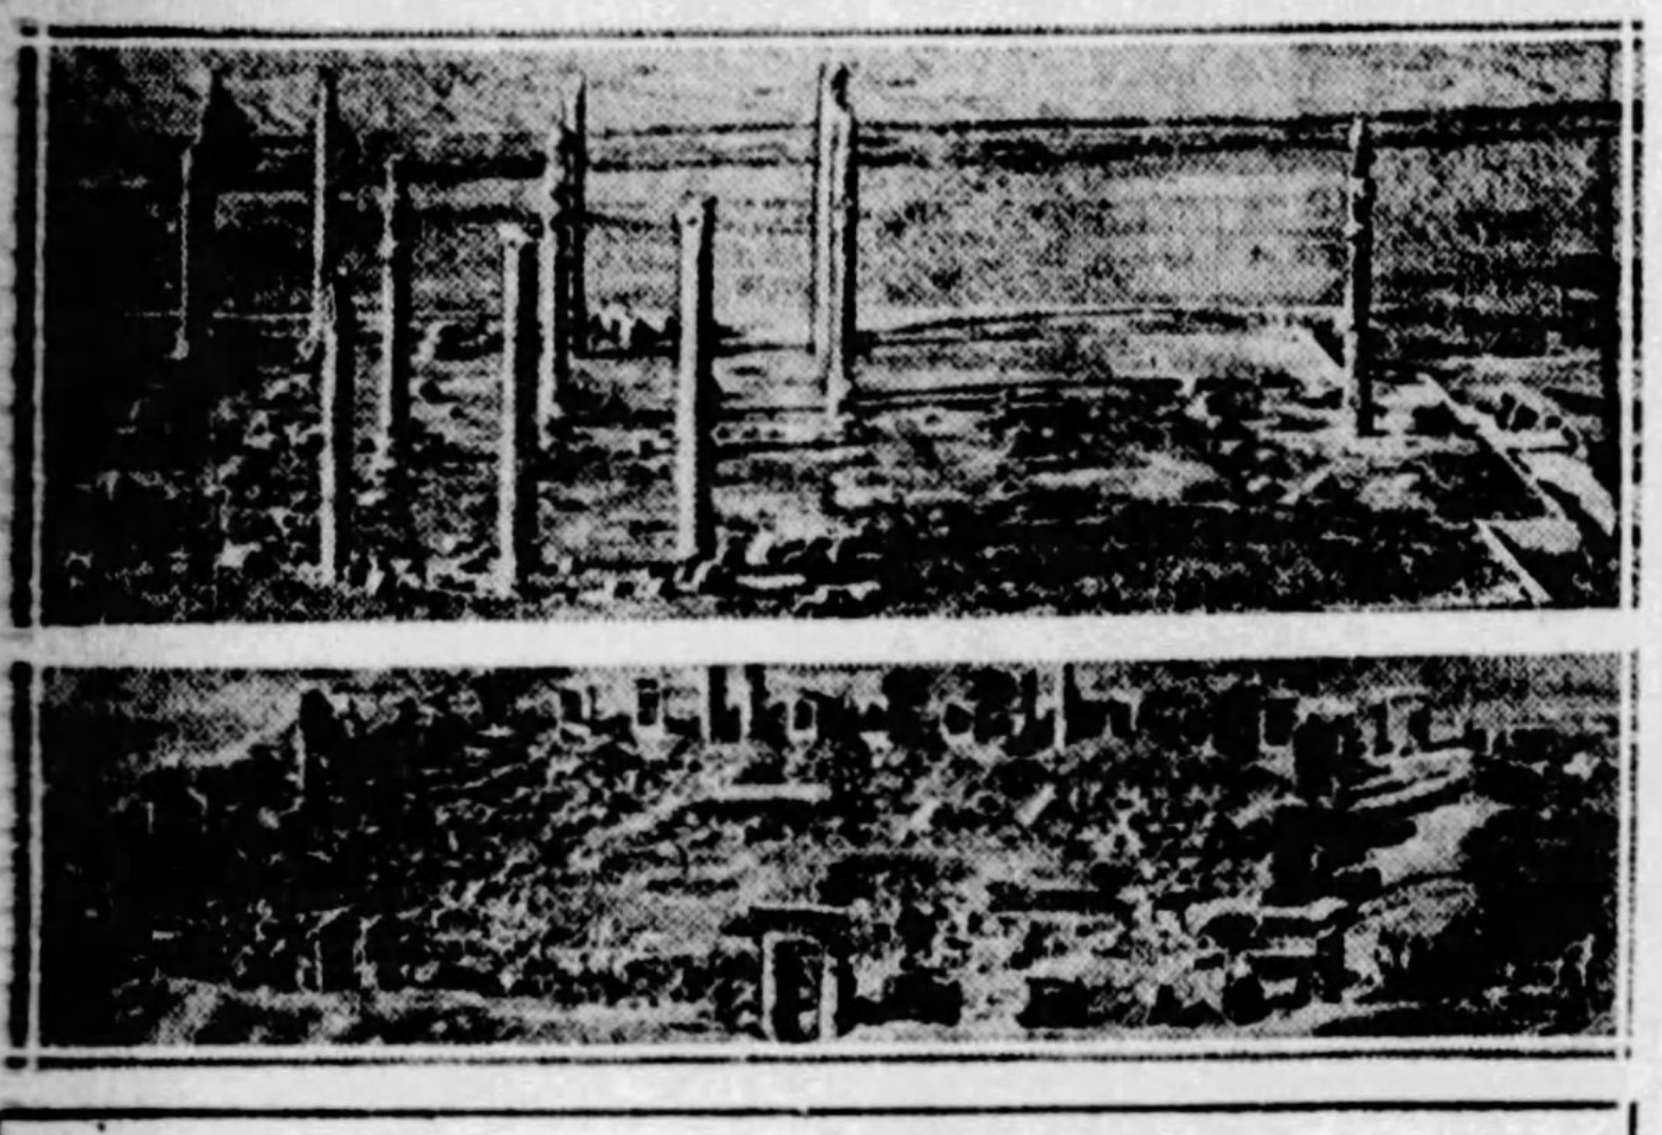
Parks Belong to People At Night as Well as Day

James F. Malone, president of Council, wants James M. Clark, director of public safety, to stop police shooing people out of the parks at 10 o'clock at night. That's just the shank of the evening, Mr. Malone avers, and he sees no reason why persons who want to avail themselves of the refreshing coolness of the parks should be rudely disturbed in their rest and meditation by a policeman and told it is time for all good people to be in bed, or out of the parks, anyway. Mr. Malone says there is no law calling for the parks to shut up shop at 10 o'clock, and that if people want to stay after that hour the police should guard and protect them instead of telling them to vamoose.

Many will be inclined to think Mr. Malone has the right idea. The parks belong to the people and anything that will extend their use by the people should have serious attention. Regulations governing parks likely are made with the idea of preventing depredations and destruction of public property, but regulations can easily be changed if the public makes the demand. Of course, to the eye, the parks make their greater appeal in the daylight hours, but if there are persons who enjoy the solitude of night, why interfere with them?

When Thais Had Her Day

And the Great Darius Built.



MAJESTY ONCE DWELT HERE.

These two pictures show views of Persepolis, great city of Persian kings. Darius started building the city 500 B. C., and Xerxes finished it thirty years later.

The upper picture shows all that is left of the great audience hall, where the king sat receiving the tributes of lesser potentates. They crawled to the foot of his throne on their hands and knees. Not much of him or his audience hall now.

The lower picture shows the great hall of Xerxes. That monarch lived not far from Greece, but had to ask who the Greeks were, when his great fleet was destroyed by them. He said to his "remembrancer" that he wished to be reminded to go some time and destroy that little people.

Instead, that little people represented by Alexander and his Macedonians, came to Persia and destroyed the Persian Empire.

A lady friend of Alexander the Great, who lived at a rapid pace and died young, was the famous Thais. You may have listened to an opera written about her. Anyhow, she was no better than she should be. According to tradition, it was at her request, just to satisfy a whim, that Alexander ordered the great city of the Persian kings destroyed by fire.

Others more reasonable suggested that he destroy Persepolis to get vengeance on the Persians for burning the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus. Whatever his motive, there is no doubt that Alexander did ruthlessly destroy the magnificent city by fire.

Americans interested in genuine antiques could get some interesting things in the sand not far from these ruins, if allowed.

To atone for his destruction of Persepolis, Alexander did some very fine city building, including Alexandria. He planned one city, and it is a pity he never built it. The plan called for a statue of himself cut out of a solid mountain of rock. The arm was to be stretched out, a roadway was to run down along the arm. The city was to stand in the palm of the conqueror's outstretched hand. That would have been quite a city.

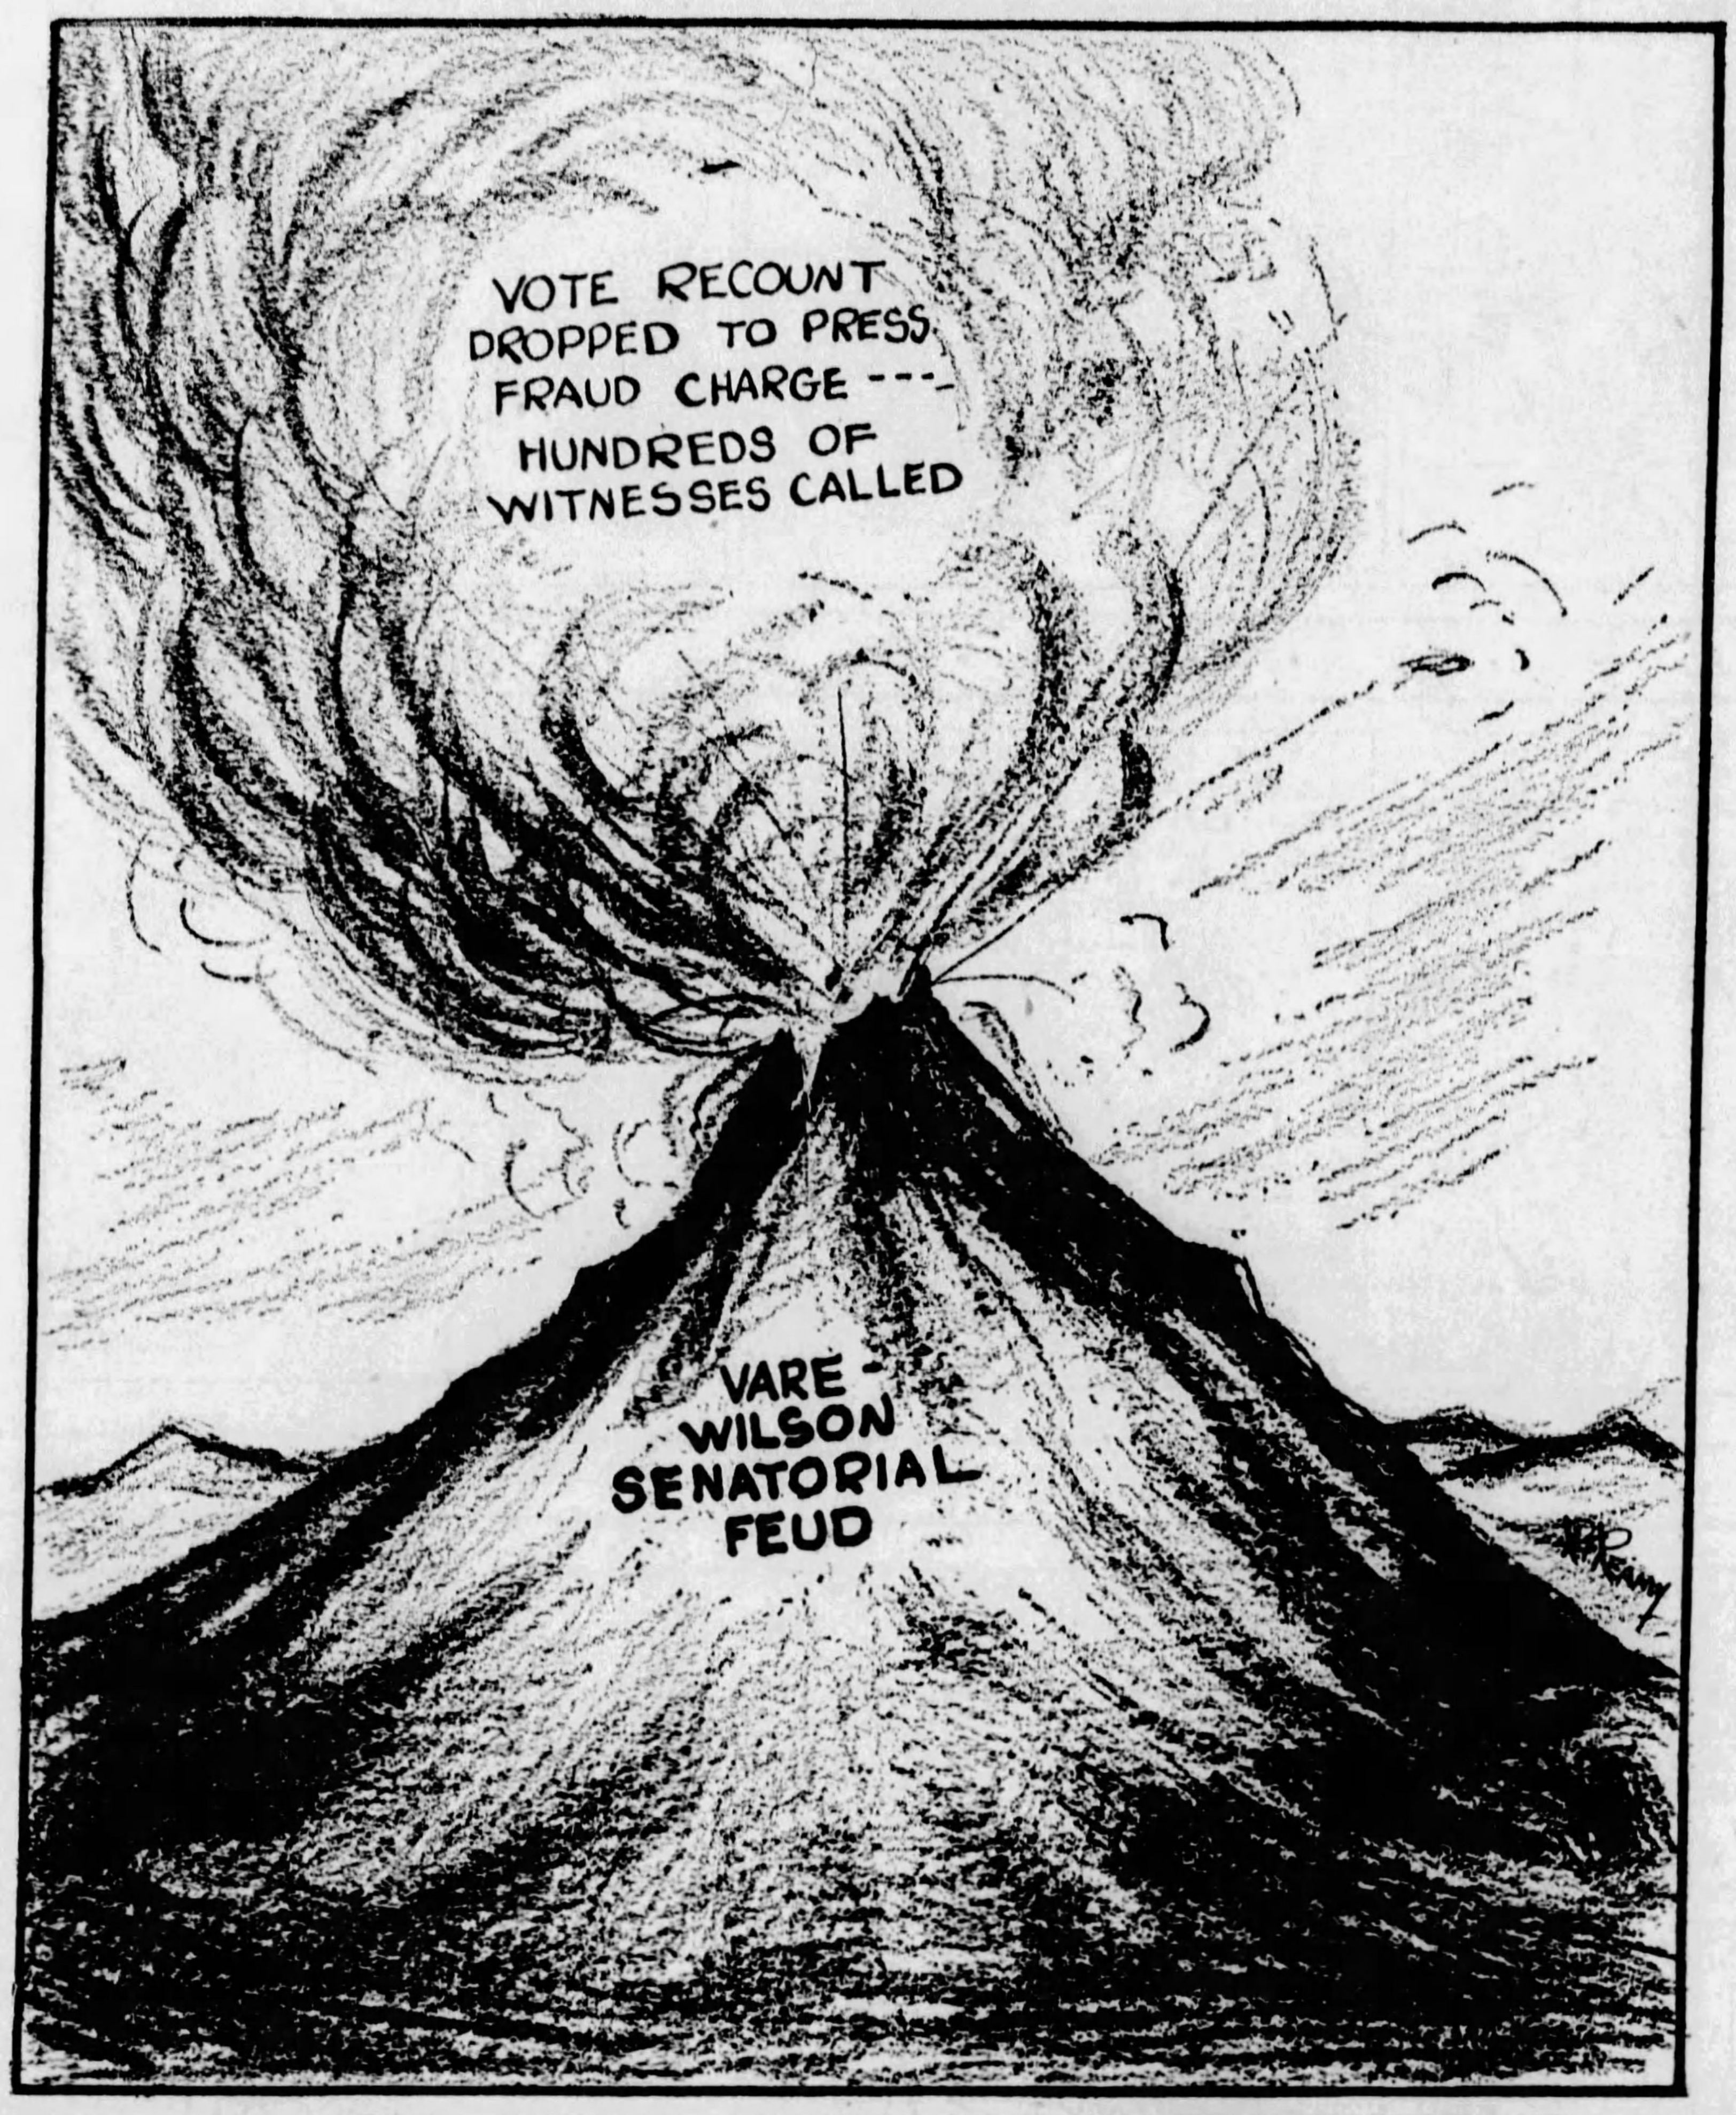
The picture below shows to what extent the Persians developed sculpture. This is one of the winged bulls with a human head and face that guarded the main entrance to the Palace of Darius.

The Arab standing beside it indicates its size. When fire swept away all that beauty, it also swept away the work of tens of thousands of slaves, working and toiling under the lash in the hot sun. No wonder that religions originating in Asia represented hell as a very HOT place—just as the religion of the Eskimos represent hell as extremely COLD, all ice.

ONE OF DARIUS' BULLS

Dante took both ideas. He had various layers in hell horribly hot. Satan himself was fastened in ice up to his waist, the cold and freezing caused by the motion of his bat-like wings.

ERUPTING AGAIN!



VOTE RECOUNT DROPPED TO PRESS FRAUD CHARGE--- HUNDREDS OF WITNESSES CALLED VARE-WILSON SENATORIAL FEUD

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Showing Light-Waves

"I would like to know if the speed of light is the same, regardless of the medium through which it travels. When it travels through glass, water and air, is the speed affected by these mediums, and if so how is the change affected?—H. D. Turner, Chicago."

THE speed of light is affected by the medium through which it passes. If it were not so, we should have no telescopes, no microscopes and no spectacles. We should not even have rainbows after a shower. All of these things depend upon the "refraction," or turning of light out of its direct course, and such turning is caused by the delay which the light-waves suffer in passing through media which more or less obstruct their motion. In the rainbow we have a picturesque example of the fact that light-waves of different frequency of vibration, are not all equally delayed in passing through water. The waves at the red end of the spectrum are less delayed in traversing a raindrop than those at the blue end, from which it follows that the colors characteristic of each set of waves from red through orange, yellow, green and blue, to violet are spread out like the bands of a varicolored ribbon, and the rainbow is the exquisite result. Similar effects are produced by passing light through a glass prism.

The action of glass lenses in forming images of luminous or illuminated objects at a focus also depends upon a change in the velocity of the light-waves in passing through the glass. Light travels only about two-thirds as fast in glass as in air. In water it travels about three-fourths as fast as in air. In air it travels about one 3,000th slower than in vacuum. Open space outside the earth's atmosphere and between the planets and the stars is assumed to be a vacuum—though we do not absolutely know that that is so, yet it must be very nearly so—from which we conclude that the actual velocity of light is that which it possesses when passing through a vacuum. This velocity as determined by the experiments of Michelson at Mount Wilson in 1926 is 299,820 kilometers per second, equal to 186,300 miles, with a probable error of not over 25 miles.

Light is assumed to be an electro-magnetic wave motion in a suppostitious medium called the ether, which is not matter, as we know, matter, but to which, nevertheless, some of the attributes of matter are assigned in order to account for observed facts. This ether is supposed to fill all space, including even the space occupied by solid masses of matter. Just as you may see the motion of ocean waves rolling in upon a coast slowed by the interference of a fance of piles through which the water has to pass, so you may imaginatively picture the light-waves in the vibrating ether delayed by the more or less open texture of a gaseous liquid or solid medium that they encounter on their way. The air being gaseous, and of very rare density compared with water and glass, causes but slight delay to the light-waves; the liquid water causes less delay than the solid glass, but both are vastly more effective in that respect than air.

Debunkers Busy

LIBRARIAN PUTNAM, of the Library of Congress, has joined the iconoclasts who are busy debunking history and intimates grave doubt that Mistress Betsy Ross, of Philadelphia, had anything to do with making the first flag of the nation because he has been unable to dig up any bill or voucher showing that money was paid to Mrs. Ross for working on the flag.

An unsatisfactory reason for demolishing a tradition. What if the pretty seamstress didn't put in a bill? In those days perhaps there were men and women who were willing to perform a service for their country without asking to be paid for it.

Perhaps Mrs. Ross didn't make the flag. Maybe the picture showing the stately Washington, the gallant Morris and the avuncular Ross conferring with the pretty little widow is a mere figment of imagination. Maybe the flag was sewed together by some regimental tailor who chewed tobacco.

Who cares? We must have national heroes, we must have romantic figures in our history. Betsy and her home have provided one of the most satisfactory of these. If she didn't make the flag, who did?

DAD would like a little attention once in a while.

He does not expect as much as is given Mother, but still he would like to be considered more than the mere money-maker for the family.

Usually when men and women write home they address letters to mothers.

Most of what they contain is of interest to mothers.

Incidentally some mention may be made of "Dad."

Dads are not supposed to be sentimental.

But this thought is carried too far by most people.

A little special message to Dad should be included in each letter.

He may not do more than grunt when he reads it.

But it is safe to bet that he will try to get hold of that letter and read and reread the pleasing reference to himself.

Mother will be pleased, too, if Dad is remembered.

She knows him better than the children do.

She realizes he likes to think he has a warm spot in the hearts of his boys and girls.

Poor old Dad, he does not get much consideration—and how long would the home run without him?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Beach

And little, eager waves that go
With laughter up the shining beach,
Then scamper backward, out of reach.
Wind, clouds and seagulls, all at play,
The beach is making holiday.

A frolic wind of madcap mirth
Has seized upon once-solemn earth,
Blue waves toss shells along the shore
Then swiftly snatch them back once more.
Far out, the porpoise splash at play,
They, too, are making holiday.

And fragrant, vagrant winds that blow
To greet glad tots, with pail and spade,
To welcome swimmers, youth and maid.
Who can resist such lure today,
When sky and sea make holiday?

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THERE'S all kinds of human misery, I reckon. And folks have a habit of saying, "I wonder what he ever done to deserve all the troubles he's got."

People just kinda like to believe that anybody that does them a mean trick will get paid back with an awful wallop. There was two fellows from the home town talking in a big city about the old days.

"Say," says Jim, "you remember that Dorothy Jilkins that wouldn't marry you? What ever happened to her?"

"Yes, I know all about her," says George, kinda sad. "She got paid back, the poor girl. I never could-a wished her so much hard luck."

"What's the matter? Did her old man leave her flat?"

"No, but she's got three sons, and all of them plays the saxophone."

The Last Word

THE Maharajah of Indore, while in New York, was asked his opinion of prohibition. With a gracious smile the potentate replied:

"Prohibition is no good to the prohibitionists, for they wouldn't drink anyway, and it is no good to the anti-prohibitionists, for they can easily buy or make all the hooch they want.

"We have an Indian proverb which says, I think, the last word on this question:

"'It is not wine that makes a man drunk; it is the man himself.'"

Not So Innocent

IT WAS the first time she had been to dinner with them, and they smiled indulgently as she refused a whisky-and-soda.

"I've never touched it in my life," she explained.

"Why not try?" urged her host. "See if you like the taste."

She blushed, and shyly consented, and he poured her out a mixture, which she raised to her lips.

"Why," she cried, "you've given me Irish?"

"How's That?"

A VILLAGE cricket match was delayed for some time owing to the absence of an umpire. The home skipper, recognizing an acquaintance among the crowd, asked the man to officiate. He was willing to do so.

"Aw reet," said the skipper. "We're fieldin' first. Whenever you hear anybody say 'Huzzat?' you say 'Out.' Later on, when we go in to bat,, I'll tell thee a bit more."

Qualified

THE animal trainer having been taken ill, his wife reported for duty in his stead.

"Have you had any experience in this line?" asked the proprietor of the circus, doubtfully.

"Not exactly in this line," replied the woman; "but my husband manages the beasts all right, doesn't he?"

"He certainly does."

"Well, you ought to see how easily I manage him!"

Presented at Court

A SCOT appeared in an English police court, his head swathed in bandages. An Irishman, charged with assaulting the Scot with a kettle, pointed to the injured party and said, scornfully:

"Those bandages are all show. He was walking about without them yesterday."

"Is that true?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes," replied the Scot. "I wanted to keep them clean for today."

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 7.—There are, according to official tabulations, more than 10,000 Broadway racketeers. That is to say, there are that many nimble-witted gentlemen of doubtful character able to wrest a living out of the gullibility of a hard-boiled district.

Peculiarly enough, the slickest sharpers angle for suckers in that sophisticated strip between Columbus Circle and Herald Square. It is there they pick up what they call "important money." It has often required no more than a southern colonel hat and a black string tie to bait a victim.

Nothing so convincingly betrays the Broadway sucker complex as the fake jewelry auctions that run full blast from noon until midnight. They couldn't scare up a handful of customers in Plattsburg, Mo., during court week, but on Broadway auction rooms are filled to overflowing.

The smoothest of the racketeers is a character known as Dapper Dan. The police have caught him in their Tenderloin net time after time, but he has always managed to wriggle out to go on his way with his tongue in his cheek and a terribly hurt look.

There is something about the racketeer's rather turbulent life that fascinates lovely ladies. He is seen with them in the pleasure bazars. He seems to appear to them as a romantic chevalier instead of a miserable gleaner along the way that is white.

The average racketeer has none of the red-corpuscled courage that is often found in the underworld character. He is a sneak who pales at the sight of a bluecoat. His spoils are spent in acquiring a sartorial dogginess and affecting a come-easy-go-easy manner.

Victims of these sharpers are not always the boys with the round haircuts and mountainous-toed shoes who go back to the brush to unwrap their gold bricks. They are as likely as not the city bred who know all the answers.

Not so long ago six Broadway theatrical stars fell for the "package-from-Paris" racket. That is they paid heavy "custom duty" on packages which, of course, they never received.

And a gentleman on Forty-second street and Broadway was approached by a guileless stranger who inquired to know how in the tarnation they wound up the big Paramount clock. The city gentleman revealed his horological knowledge at length as they gazed upward at the electrical timepiece. A half hour later he was not only looking for his own watch, but his purse and tie pin. He is, it might be added, a writer who has often specialized in stories of underworld trickery.

Then there is the story of one of the shrewest of pickpockets who has a midget as his accomplice. They work in heavy crowds. The pickpocket does his work, passes the loot swiftly to his hop-o-my-thumb aide, who invariably slips away without being noticed.

* * *

And as old as it is—even in these torrid days—the stolen fur racket continues to flourish. The victim is approached always on a dark street and in a loft building district by a fellow who resembles a truckman. He gives the sly impression of having a stolen fur to sell cheap. His manner is furtive, and he seems glad to get rid of it as little as $20. In the dim light it looks a bargain. The same article can be purchased for $20 a dozen.

* * *

I know of no city so considerate of the aged as New York. Newsboys will pause in their work to escort old men and women across the street. Traffic cops leave their post at the first show of bewilderment on the part of aged pedestrians. Headwaiters in cafes will almost invariable give elderly couples choice tables and even rapacious hat-snatchers look the other way when delivering their hats or wraps. It is rather pleasant to be old in New York.

What Is Worth While?

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The difference probably between the man of good judgment and the scatter-brain is that the former emphasizes the important things and lets alone the unimportant, while the latter is equally in earnest about them all.

A man has reached a great point in his career when he can see that a lot of things make no difference to him.

He has a certain end in view and only appreciates the things that bear on that end. Other matters make no difference.

The line that divides the successful man from the unsuccessful is usually the fact that the successful man never loses sight of the goal he has in view, while the unsuccessful man runs about hither and thither like an ant. He has activity, but it is largely waste motion.

Every once in a while you hear on the street the expression, "What's the big idea?"

The big idea seems to stand for the main and informing purpose for which anything is done or said.

The big idea is like the perfect design of the building in the mind and the trestle board of the architect. He gives to every man his work and puts every piece of material in its place. It all coordinates according to the big idea.

A business will go to smash unless in it there is a big idea, some mind that can correlate and unify all of its various activities.

I have read some novels that seemed to be a mere frittering away of my time, for there was no dominant thought about which they were written.

Religious belief in a way simply means that a man has some big idea about his life, and all of his words and deeds must conform to this plan.

Music is not merely a pleasant succession of sounds. It must have unity and form and individuality. There must be a big idea behind it.

The idea is bigger than the man that has it. A man becomes great only when he allows himself to be absorbed in the idea.

Many people suffer because their energies are frittered away. They have no cohesive plan, and everything they do is hit or miss. They never amount to anything, because there is no big idea behind them.

Even in the matter of physical culture there must be a plan and system. It cannot be fortuitous.

Search yourself carefully to find your dominating desire, and see that it is such as can merit your giving up all your life to it.

Then you will come to success on board a big idea when you never would have attained it otherwise.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

EASTERNERS have remarked often enough about the women out West, especially those who got rich quick, wearing diamonds to breakfast. But spend years in the West and you won't see half as many ridiculous performances as you see in New York. And as for diamonds, only yesterday I saw at least a dozen women during a morning's shopping tour blazing with jewels. And at luncheon they rested their elbows on the tables to keep the weight of their bracelets off the arms.

A night club hostess was laughing with a national committee woman the other day in New York and she wore white sport clothes and several thousand dollars worth of diamonds. And it was SUCH a hot day too!

There are more than 2,000,000 married women employed in the United States.

No wonder the delicatessen business is so good.

About 39 per cent of the women workers are between the ages of 20 and 24. From 25 to 44 years of age the percentage drops to 23 per cent. Which proves that the dangerous age is from 24 to 44. Most of the women stopped work to marry. If you don't want to marry side-step the women between 24 and 44 years of age—and have a perfectly miserable time.

Of the close-to-nine-million women at work in this country, about 2,200,000 are domestics.

Yet try to find one!

A Los Angeles judge says that a woman who earns her own living and contributes to the upkeep of the home, can do as she pleases, and her husband has no right to ask her where she has been and what she was doing.

But when the men earned ALL the money spent in the home, no one relieved them of the pressure put upon them.

And right now it's going to take more than a court decree to keep a husband still when he wants to ask questions.

A San Francisco woman married 15 years received only 15 cents a week for spending money and never complained.

There should be a place for SHE right next to WE in the Smithsonian Institute.

Isn't It So?

You may lead a fool to talk, but you cannot make him think.

If a man owes anything to himself he is apt to settle promptly.

Good luck is hard to catch but bad luck is more apt to chase you.

Nothing worries some wives like the absence of worry in their husbands.

Some people are never so happy as when given a chance to tell their troubles.

The looking glass always tells the truth, but a woman interprets its reflection to suit herself.

It isn't easy for a man to keep cool when it is up to him to choose between the frying pan and the fire.

Women are creatures of moods—and many a man has discovered that his wife's mood is the imperative.
